ANALYSIS SHOWS A LANDSLIDE TO WILSON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 4.—Indications for tomorrow are that it will be ideal voting weather in practically all localities East of the Rockies. The day will be generally fair and the temperature higher than today's.

With the opening of the polls for the national election less than twenty-four hours away, an unbiased and analytical eleventh hour review of the situation leads to the belief that Woodrow Wilson, the Democratic candidate, will be elected President of the United States by an overwhelming majority.

The most important single factor in the impending election is the strength or weakness of the landslide for Col. Roosevelt, which the supporters of the ex President claim will come.

Roosevelt's strength, however, is believed to be overestimated on the part of the Progressives. Nothing tangible has been developed to support their claims.

New Jersey is the only State in which the straw polls show that the Colonel is

ODDS OF 6 TO 1 ON WILSON FIND NO TAKERS ON "STREET"

NEW YORK, Nov. 4—Betting on the election is at a standstill here. Sporting men believe the election of Mr. Wilson is a foregone conclusion. Odds at 6 to 1 and better find no takers.

A well-known stockholder has posted the following table, which indicates the rise and fall of the three candidates, as viewed from the betting man's standpoint:

	Open	High	Low	Latest
Wilson	2 to 1	6 to 1	2 to 1	6 to 1
Roosevelt	1 to 6	1 to 7	1 to 2½	1 to 4
Taft	1 to 5	1 to 7	1 to 3	1 to 5

This shows that the odds on Governor Wilson have been advanced, while the odds on the other two candidates have fluctuated. Taft opening as a favorite over Roosevelt and the latter having gained until he now is a slight favorite over the Republican nominee.

JOHN D. SAYS HE'S CHURCH PROGRESSIVE

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—The Rev. Arthur T. Brooks yesterday celebrated his second anniversary as pastor of the First Baptist Church at Tarrytown. Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rockefeller both came down from Pocantico Hills to attend the service and remain for communion. Mr. Rockefeller shook hands with Mr. Brooks, congratulating him on the growth and progressive spirit in the church. "I am a progressive in church affairs," said Mr. Rockefeller.

It's Grandpa Foss! Wife's Birthday, Too, So Governor Smiles

Eugene Noble Foss, 2nd, weight eight and a quarter pounds, was born today. Of course that means that Governor Foss became a grandfather.

The Governor brought the glad news to the State House. He came in a bit late from his home in Jamaica Plain. He wore a broad smile. There were several callers already in his office, also Secretary Sherman and the office staff.

"Wonder what's up?" somebody whispered, noting the smile was suspiciously broad.

"Election smile, is it, Governor?" was asked aloud.

"I'm a grandfather today," replied the Governor, smiling still.

Today was also the birthday of Mrs. Foss, wife of the Governor. So the visit of the stork meant a double rejoicing. The baby was born to Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Foss, the Governor's son and daughter-in-law, at their home in Jamaica Plain. Young Mrs. Foss was Miss Dorothy Chapman of San Francisco.

The Governor was congratulated on all sides. His friends told him that his happiness today over the birth of the "election baby" would be echoed by his smiles tomorrow night when the returns are all in.

Curley Won't Fight Connolly, but Will Sue Him for Libel

Congressman James M. Curley declined today to meet James B. Connolly, the author, on a basis of pistols and daggers for two, between 9 o'clock and midnight as challenged to a face-to-face meeting by the Bull Moose candidate. Congressman Curley will institute a suit of criminal libel against Connolly instead, after election.

Connolly's challenge to Curley was based on alleged statements made by the Congressman concerning the Republic wreck experiencers of the Bull Moosers. In his card to the Congressman, Connolly asked that he be given the privilege of meeting his opponent face to face, preferably at Curley's own headquarters. Here is Curley's reply today:

"The first thing I want to say in reply to Mr. Connolly's challenge is that I shall see the District Attorney the moment this campaign is off my hands, probably on Wednesday morning, and give Connolly a chance to make good. I shall institute criminal libel proceedings against him at that time.

"The statements upon which I shall base my charges of criminal libel on are contained in a pamphlet entitled 'Connolly's Fight,' supposedly issued by him. In it he says:

"'The Elevated railway had a strike, the strikers were holding out in good shape, and eventually they won, as we all know now, but for a time it was in doubt. While it was in doubt, Mr. Curley, who would live and die for organized labor on election day, sends a henchman of his to the car barns to break in strike-breakers to their new work.'"

CANON HENSON AT CATHEDRAL TODAY

High churchmen of the Episcopal church in Massachusetts were conspicuously absent today from St. Paul's Cathedral, when Canon H. H. Henson of Westminister Abbey, London, preached at the noon service. This is the first time that Canon Henson has preached in Boston during his second visit to America. Upon his last visit he said many radical things about the church of England, that offended many of the Massachusetts clergy. Today Canon Henson scored the colossal wealth of this country and called it the curse of the earth.

BROWN IS BLAMED BY WIFE FOR HER DEATH

The will of Mrs. Ida Johnson Brown, who died in Hyde Park General Hospital Saturday night, which was filed today accuses her husband the Rev. William A. Brown of having caused her death and leaves everything to her mother, Mrs. Ida Johnson, in trust for her daughter. This daughter is Ida Brown, eight years old, who since the death of her mother has mysteriously disappeared. The father took the child following the mother's death, and neither has been seen since.

The body of the dead woman was taken to Brooklyn today for burial.

Leaves All to Mother.

The woman's will, which was filed today in the Suffolk County Probate Court, is as follows.

Being weak in body and with no prospects of recovery, but of sound and disposing mind and memory, I make this my last will and testament revoking all others. I give my body to my mother and request that it be buried in the family lot in Brooklyn, New York.

All my property, real, personal or mixed, I give to my mother, Ida Johnson, in trust nevertheless for my daughter, Ida, to be given to her upon her arrival at the age of twenty-one years; the income, if any, or the principal, if required in the opinion of the trustee, to be used for Ida's support or education.

Accuse Husband.

I purposely leave nothing to my husband, William A. Brown, as he is the cause of my death, and if any other reasons are desired I refer to a sworn statement by me, dated April 12, 1912, and in the custody of my lawyer, George M. Nay.

I appoint as executrix and trustee my mother, Ida Johnson, and request that she be not refuired to furnish any surety or sureties on her official bond.

Witness my hand this twenty-fourth day of June, 1912.

(Signed) IDA J. BROWN.

On the reverse side.

Signed, published and declared as and for her last will and testament by the within-named Ida J. Brown, who signed the same in our presence, we three as witnesses signing the same in her presence the twenty-fourth day of June, 1912.

HENRY L. HOUGHTON,

The will was on a single sheet of foolscap paper with writing on both sides. The signature of the testator was in a scrawly hand.

FIREMEN SAVE MAN HELPLESS UPON ROOF

William A. Chamberlain, a carpenter, while at work upon a roof at No. 2189 Dorchester avenue, Dorchester, today became violently ill and but for the prompt arrival of the fire department, which saved him from dropping forty feet to the ground, would have been injured. Chamberlain is subject to a form of sickness that renders him helpless. He was seized with one of these attacks while near the ridge pole of the roof. He slid to the gutter, where his heels caught. Chamberlain is fifty-seven years old and lives at No. 121 River street, Dorchester Lower Mills.

Quiz Soldier Upon Kidnaping of Boy

New Clew in Mystery of Stolen Child

Say Enlisted Man at Fort Revere Threatened Once to Take Yates Child.

DESCRIPTION OF THE WOMAN KIDNAPER

About twenty-eight years old.
Five feet, eight inches tall.
Light hair.
Eyebrows pencilled.
Face painted.
Wore black hat with plumes, and long brown coat.

A soldier at Fort Revere, who manifested deep affection for little Jimmie and Edward Yates of No. 44 Lynde street, West End, and who even threatened once that he would take one of the boys from his parents is to be questioned today as to any knowledge he might have of the whereabouts of five-year-old Edward, kidnaped boldly last Thursday.

This information, including the name of the soldier, was given to the police today by the heart-broken mother of the missing boy. To it was added the statement that the soldier is friendly with a woman whose description matches that of a woman who carried the little fellow off.

The soldier to be questioned some months ago called on a woman who lodged with the Yates'. When there he often expressed his admiration for the two little boys of the household, Jimmie, eight, and his younger brother, Edward.

Wanted to Take Boy.

"That's a bright boy," he told Mrs. Yates, she said today, speaking of Jimmie. "I'd like to have him a while. I would take him down to the fort and take the best care of him."

"Well, you can't get either of my boys," Mrs. Yates told him.

At another time the soldier saw Edward and remarked to his mother:

"That's the handsomest little boy in Boston."

"Yes, I think so," replied his fond mother.

"Why not let me take him down to the fort?"

"Oh, I could not think of that," she replied.

The soldier saw the father of the children. He appealed to him to be allowed to

Last Words of Candidates to Nation's Voters

By WOODROW WILSON.

It is clear that the people of the country now perceive that the Democratic party is the only in- strumentality at hand through which they can realize their as- pirations and their desire for im- mediate justice in the business af- fairs of the country. No other party is ready to serve them. No other party could furnish them with organized force. They are turning to the Democratic party as the ready instrument, and its leaders realize as clearly as the leaders of any party in the coun- try the necessity of a program of human justice and political recti- tude.

By PRESIDENT TAFT.

I have no doubt as to the is- sue of this campaign. The people will not be slow to vindicate an administration under which there has been greater prosperity for both the wage-earner and the wage-payer than ever before in the history of the United States. They will hesitate to turn over the gov- ernment for four years to a party which precipitated a commercial explosion by its experiments when last it was in power, or to inno- vators who have committed them- selves to experiments still more radical and doubtful.

By THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

It is surely time for all honest and decent citizens without regard to their past political affiliations to support the Progressive party. This is in no ordinary sense of the word a mere partisan move- ment. It is a movement for hon- esty and decency and for fair play in the world of industry, no less than in the world of politics, and we have the right to appeal to all good citizens to support it.

"L" INCREASES CAPITAL STOCK

At the annual meeting of the stockhold- ers of the Boston Elevated Railway Com- pany this noon it was voted to increase the capital of the company from $19,950,- 000 to $23,950,000 by the issue of 40,000 shares of stock, par value $100, to be of- fered to stockholders at $105 per share. It was also voted to authorize an issue of bonds with a face value not exceeding $5,- 000,000.

These bonds are to be negotiable, coupon or registered, and are to be payable in not more than thirty years, with the actual ma- turity and rate of interest to be decided by the executive committee of the board of directors.

The retiring directors were re-elected and Gilen L. Stone, the Boston and New York banker, was added to the board. Mr. Stone's election is a recognition of the financial position which he occupies in Bos- ton. Although Mr. Stone is also a trustee of the Massachusetts Electric Companies, it is not at all necessary to read into his election to the Boston Elevated board any new development so far as the relations of the Boston Elevated and the Massachusetts Electric Companies are concerned. These relations have been and will continue to be of the friendliest nature.

"WE WILL WIN," ASSERTS WALSH

David I. Walsh, Democratic candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, in a statement today, declared that he is confident that Governor Foss and the entire Democratic ticket will be victorious at the polls tomorrow. In an- other statement, Mr. Walsh replies to the attacks made upon him by Lieutenant-Gov- ernor Luce.

He says:

My campaign against Lieutenant-Governor Luce has been waged upon principles and not upon personalities. It is confident from the reception which has been exceedingly fair, that my election is assured. These calculations are based upon the fact that a vote for me is an endorsement of the great priciples advocated by Governor Foss and the illustrious candidate for the presidency.

I have made clear my attitude on all the great problems that are before the people today, and feel certain from reports received that I will receive the same vote given to the presidential candidate and our Governor.

In his reply to Lieutenant-Governor Luce, Mr. Walsh said:

Mr. Luce is a defeated man. He is mistaken as to the extent of the oppo- sition to him. He is not only opposed by the laboring men of the Common- wealth, but by a united Democratic party. Moreover, thousands of Repub- licans are opposed to him and believe that he is a burden for that party to carry.

Last year over 20,000 Republicans voted against him and this year even more will vote against him. For this they have many good and sufficient reasons, not the least of which is their desire to rid the Republican party of the burden of carrying him.

As a public official in the House of Representatives, and later as leg- islative counsel for corporations, and finally as acting-Governor, in the ab- sence of Governor Foss, his haughty and imperious disregard for the rights of labor, even to a hearing, all these things have made him such a burden to his party that no candidate of his party, even on the ticket with him now, dares urge upon the voters of the State his election to any office.

HUNT WOMAN AS KIDNAPER

take one of the boys to the fort. When the father laughed at the request the sol- dier is alleged to have said:

"Well, I'll get one of them yet."

The parents thought the man was joking. They did not recall the matter until yes- terday. Then Mrs. Yates looked up the woman who formerly lodged with her and upon whom the soldier called. This woman said she knew nothing about the missing boy, but added this:

"I know that the man is acquainted with a woman whose description matches that of the woman who took little Eddie. She may have taken the boy. I think I would see the soldier."

All of these facts were laid before the Joy street police today and the mother said that she hoped that through them she would regain the possession of her boy.

The boy was kidnaped last Thursday, under the mother's very eyes. All search for him since has been without success. Today, when the police resumed their hunt, it was a "mock of golden hair" for which they watched.

Aside from his hair, little Edward Yates was just a common, garden variety of baby—not at all different from the thou- sands you can see—or cannot help seeing and hearing about the West End streets. He was one, of four brothers and sisters, but Edward was the pride and joy of his mother's heart. It was his hair she loved best, and the busy woman spent hours more than she could spare in combing and caring for it. There was no need of curl- ing the long locks. They fell in natural ringlets over his shoulders. The mother loved to twist these ringlets on her fin- ger as she held the baby head against her breast.

Here is Edward's description, as given to the police. It pictures him just as he was, when a strange woman saw him play- ing with his brother and half a dozen other children, enticed him into a drug store, bought the others some candy and sent them home, then hurried the lad away.

That is what you would have seen, if you had wandered along Lynde street Thurs- day afternoon. If you had called the boy to you, patted his confidence, and run your fingers down between his right ear, under the thick curls, you would have felt the mark of a tiny scar, there from his baby days.

The woman who kidnaped Edward will be easily identified if she is found. Ed- ward's older brother, Jimmie, saw her. So did the other children. But the easiest identification would be given by the drug clerk who sold her a quarter's worth of candy—the candy with which she sent the other children home, while she stole away with Edward.

WOMAN SUICIDE OF CHARLES FOUND TO BE FROM ROSLINDALE

The body of the woman found float- ing in the Charles River near the River street bridge, Cambridge, yesterday, was identified today as that of Mrs. Katherine Schuschke, widow of Ferdinand Schuschke of No. 18 Linden street, Roslindale. Rela- tives of the dead woman were after being told that the dead woman wore a ring in which were engraved the initials "F. S. to K. W."

The Cambridge police were told that Mrs. Schuschke was undoubtedly a suicide. Recently she bought property worth $8,500, paying $4,000 cash and giving a mortgage for the rest. Later she was forced to sell the property for $5,250. The police said she brooded over this, and left her home Friday night after supper.

She first visited a neighbor at No. 40 Linden street, Roslindale. There she left a note addressed to relatives, saying she did not care to live longer and giving in- structions as to what should be done with her body, according to the information given out by the Cambridge police.

Today the body was claimed by a cousin and a stepdaughter of the dead woman.

SAYS STRIKERS WERE ATTACKED

SALEM COURTHOUSE, Nov. 4.—Charles F. Hobica, a mill operative, tes- tified today at the trial of Ettor, Giovan- nitti and Caruso, charged with complicity in the murder of Mrs. Annie Lo Pezzi, that he saw soldiers and police assault strikers. He couldn't recall the date, but it was about the day, he thought, that John Rami, the Syrian youth, was killed with a bayo- net. Reference to the Rami tragedy was excluded. Hobica couldn't tell whether it was a week or a month after the strike began in Lawrence. The witness is a young Syrian. He wore a brown suit, a red tie and a little flag. He said he joined the I. W. W. on January 29.

Hobica was examined by Attorney George F. Roewer, Jr., who took an active part in the trial for the first time today.

"I was at the City Hall meeting," testi- fied Hobica. "Mayor Scanlon spoke. He said he hoped the strike would be peace- fully conducted and that there would be no bloodshed, and he urged peaceful methods. Then Mr. Ettor spoke. He agreed with the Mayor that the strike should be peaceful and that there would be no bloodshed. But Mr. Ettor said that if there was bloodshed, the mill owners would be to blame."

Jurors Lose Vote.

"Unless we can hire one of those Ger- man airships to carry the jurors around in, I don't think we can arrange to have them vote tomorrow," said Foreman Ettor today.

Mayor Scanlon of Lawrence was among the batch of witnesses summoned today by the defence. He was on hand early.

Archie Addinson, a mill operative at Lawrence and a member of the I. W. W. strike committee, who declined to take an oath Saturday, resumed his testimony today.

Addinson testified that he first met Giovannitti in Lawrence on January 21. He heard him make a speech that day in which Giovannitti made an appeal for the relief of the needy Italians.

"I heard Giovannitti say: 'There is no race suicide among the Italians. Therefore, their large families must be looked out for. They must have food. A relief sta- tion should be started right away to give aid to the needy.'"

When the prisoners filed into the cage today, Ettor and Caruso sported bright, red carnations in their lapel. Giovannitti wore only his little button insignia. A black windsor tie was fastened close to the collar of his gray flannel shirt. The prisoners were cheerful and in a talkative mood.

Thomas Holliday, an English employe of the Wood Mills, told of the organization of the strike committee in the early days of the strike. He made the following quo- tation from Ettor's speeches, as he re- membered them:

"Fellow workers, the way to win this strike is to put your hands in your pock- ets. As soon as we fold our arms and cease to work, victory is ours. Be peace- ful and quiet. Christianity in a thou- sand years has never been able to do what the strike organization is doing. The Turks and the Italians, the Greeks and the Poles, and many other nationalities are being brought together in united action."

FOSS WARNS OF MONEY AT POLLS

Governor Foss today directed Chief Whitney of the State Police to make pro- vision for "a proper safeguarding against the illegal use of money by the Republi- cans in tomorrow's election."

The Governor took this action immedi- ately after a conservation over the tele- phone with Judge Thomas P. Riley, chair- man of the Democratic State Committee.

Chairman Riley told Governor Foss he had received reports from Democratic or- ganization men from all parts of the State to the effect that arrangements had been completed for the distribution of thou- sands of dollars in the various legislative districts for the purpose of insuring the election of a Republican Legislature and a Republican United States Senator.

RESCUE TUG CAPTAIN WHO FELL OVERBOARD

Forty miles south of Portland Captain Howard Heath of the tugboat Hugh Ross, one of the fleet that helped tow the dis- abled steamer Carolyn from Bangor to Bos- ton, fell overboard in an attempt to jump from his boat to another tug close by. The four men threw off their hawsers from the steamer to check its progress. Heath was drawn under the steamer, and was in the icy water twenty minutes when rescued. After working over him some time he came to his senses.

HARVARD CRIMSON'S VOICE NOW A SHOUT

The Harvard Crimson has turned "yel- low." It's a fact. With big "screamer" headlines—the type being three-quarters of an inch high, the biggest in the publica- tion's career—the last issue of the Crim- son tells the story of Harvard's greatest athletic triumph since the Harvard eleven laid Yale low in the dust four years ago. Hitherto the Crimson has contented itself with smaller type. In its biggest "spread" the "sheet" never did better than a half- inch headline.

The head had been severed and lay four feet from the trunk. The left shoe was three feet away.

Effective work now means success in the big special offer of the American's great contest

Keene, N. H., girl has entered the race and her parents are managers of campaign she is making

By the CONTEST EDITOR.

One week more!

Only seven days remain after this week before the polls close in the AMERICAN'S $40,000 Contest for the first important milestone.

It's the most crucial goal of the entire competition. Effective work NOW means success in the big Special Offer of the contest. And victory means more than the winning of one of the big Cash Prizes—it means a position at the top of the first vote list and a decided advantage in the race for the final goal—the $10,000 cash prize.

Only votes and subscriptions received up to November 16, at 10 p. m. will be counted in compiling this first vote list.

Let us see what a little effective work in the next thirteen days can do. Just suppose that you were to get three twelve months' subscriptions each day. Three isn't many—the candidates at the very bottom of the list can get three.

Now, if one 12-months' subscription equals 2,500 votes and you get three each day for thirteen days, it's not hard to figure that you will then have to your credit thirty-nine subscriptions with a credit of 156,500 votes. And you can do it, just like rolling off a log, if you even half try. It is probable that each candidate in the contest who turns in even a few subscriptions will get a valuable prize for his or her effort.

So you see it's only a matter of climbing up the list. A $600 prize is better than a $300 one, a $1,000 prize is better than a $600 one and a $10,000 prize the best of all, so climb, climb, climb!

Don't let's fool around about it, candidates, but let us get to work in earnest AT ONCE. Everyone will probably win something of value. It remains for you to say whether it will be $100, $500, $1,000 or $10,000.

It's so very easy to put things off—to "wait" and to "hope" that things will happen. Nothing will happen, absolutely nothing, unless you make it happen. Subscriptions are yours for the asking, all around you, in your immediate neighborhood, among the parents of your children's playmates, your tradespeople, your religious and social friends and acquaintances —ALL WILL HELP.

And don't lose sight of one thing—no matter what you do, much or little, you are absolutely certain to be amply rewarded for your time and effort.

The time is growing short before the polls close, but there is still plenty of time for even the most inactive candidate to get from among the tailenders to a position with the leaders.

While Miss Mildred M. Barlow of No. 28 Norway avenue, Keene, N. H., has no definite ideas of what she will do with the $10,000 if she wins it, but her parents have decided views on the subject and as they are managing the campaign for Miss Mildred, it is probable that Keene, N. H., will be on the honor roll in the final vote list.

Harvard "Goodies" Protest "Spreads" on Nights of Big Games

Harvard's united "goodies," the women who do the janitor work in the college halls, have protested against allowing "spreads" in college dormitories the night of the big football games. This year a large number were arranged for, and the rooms were accordingly prepared.

Then some fellow started up and said he needed his windows washed. This nameless hero, by diligent application to the authorities, secured an order directing the "goody" to wash his windows for the Princeton game. Then everyone else complained, and as a result all the windows of all the dormitories were complained about. Then a general order was issued that every window should be washed.

The goodies say that if this is not stopped they will have to apply for a raise in pay.

The fellows say that if it is not done they will hire men to come and wash, and charge it to the college.

The office says nothing, and there you are.

AUCTION CHURCH RATHER THAN HAVE IT DANCE HALL

HAVERHILL, Nov. 4.—The members of the $50,000 Peabody Memorial Church in Georgetown have decided to sell it at auction rather than permit dances and theatricals to be held in the building.

Francis W. Lewis, a Philadelphia attorney and one of the trustees of the will of George Peabody, has given the citizens of Georgetown until December 1 to decide whether they want the church, with the understanding that entertainments will not be held there.

It is said that the citizens will refuse to vote on the matter, in which case Mr. Lewis says the structure will be torn down.

getting votes away from the Democrats.

The Taft men, with the exception of those actively engaged in promoting the campaign, are not sanguine over the President's chances of re-election. The Taft campaign has not been as aggressive as the other two, and the appeal to the people is not so strong as that made by Wilson or Roosevelt.

Big Advantage for Wilson.

The successful candidate must receive 266 out of the 531 electorial votes if he is to receive the office at the hands of the Electorial College.

Many States may be counted in advance with a very fair degree of certainty. These are the sections of the country which are rock-ribbed for their particular political idol and are not likely to be shaken.

A glance over these states show a decided advantage for Wilson. He is as sure as is anything temporal of Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia and Missouri. This is "the Solid South" and will give the Democratic candidate 137 votes.

Roosevelt seems sure to carry Minnesota, Michigan, Iowa, Illinois and New Jersey.

Many states are in doubt. The forecast made by the Philadelphia North American gives Pennsylvania to Wilson by 12,700 votes more than Roosevelt, with Taft a poor third. The Democrats are conceded seven representatives in Congress.

If Wilson can carry Ohio, Wisconsin, Indiana, New York and any one of the New England states he will be elected, and all signs point to this.

This is without considering many States which Wilson is more likely to carry of the three candidates.

Ohio is now generally conceded to Wilson. In Indiana Wilson is expected to lead. The cause of the Progressive party is aided by the candidacy of former Senator Albert J. Beveridge, who is running for Governor.

In Illinois the outlook is not any too bright for the Colonel. Judge Edward F. Dunn is a strong candidate for Governor on the Democratic ticket.

Clean Sweep, Says McCombs.

The fight which Senator Robert M. Lafollette is waging against Roosevelt in apt to throw Wisconsin to the Democrats. Iowa is a puzzle, but Senator Cummins, a Roosevelt supporter, and Lafe Young, a prominent Taft man, both say the State will go for Wilson.

The suffrage vote may decide the election as far as six states are concerned. These are California, Washington, Idaho, Colorado, Wyoming and Utah. The campaign managers know this and are chary of their predictions. These States represent thirty-eight electoral votes between them, of which Wilson should get one-half.

WILSON MAKES FINAL SPEECHES TONIGHT

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 4.—The final speeches by Governor Wilson will be made at Passaic and Paterson this evening. The Governor's schedule called for him to leave here late in the afternoon, arriving at Jersey City at 4:45 o'clock, where his private car on the Erie Railroad has been placed in position for him.

What the Internal Bath Is Doing for Humanity

Under our present mode of living the large intestine (or colon) cannot get rid of all the waste that it accumulates—so it clogs up, and then biliousness, constipation is the result, and that lack of desire to do, to work, to think.

This waste in the colon, as we all know, is extremely poisonous, and if neglected the blood takes up the poisons—and brings on complex very serious diseases—appendicitis is directly caused by waste in the colon.

If the colon is kept clean and pure you will always feel bright and capable—never blue and nervous—always up to "concert pitch."

There is just one internal bath which will keep the colon as sweet and clean as Nature demands it to be for perfect health—that is, the "J. B. L. Cascade."

Many thousands are using it and doctors prescribing it with great success all over the world. It is now being shown and explained by all Rikes-Jaynes Drug Stores in New England.

CARDINAL GIBBONS HAS ELECTION DAY MESSAGE

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 4.—A message of assurance was given to the Catholics of the United States here by Cardinal Gibbons. The Cardinal, speaking from the Baltimore Cathedral, assured the members of his nation-wide pastorate that though dire predictions as to the political and civic future of the United States had gained credence during the present campaign no unusual calamity could in reality come to this country through political jugglery.

The Cardinal closed his semi-political discourse with a direct reference to the three presidential candidates. He said:

There are three conspicuous citizens who are now candidates for the presidency. Whatever may be my private and personal preference and prediction, it is not for me in this sacred pulpit, or anywhere else, publicly to dictate or even suggest to you the candidate of my choice.

May God enlighten the mind and quicken the conscience of the American people to a sense of their civic duties, so as to arouse in them an earnest and practical interest in the coming election, and may he so guide their hearts that they will select a Chief Magistrate who will redound to the material prosperity and moral welfare of our beloved republic.

In regard to the crisis said to be facing the voters of the United States the Cardinal said in part:

By the wise provisions of the Constitution of the United States, political authority is not concentrated in one individual or in one department of the administration, but is judiciously distributed so that the balance of power may be preserved. Our general government consists of the executive, the legislative and the judicial branches. If anything goes wrong with any one of these departments the evil is checked by the other two, and usurpation of power is prevented. There is an habitual jealousy among these branches. They are on the alert, anxiously watching one another so that no one branch may exceed its legitimate bounds. Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.

Then again, besides the Federal administration, we have State governments and county rules; we have city and town and village municipalities. If all of these minor corporations were absorbed by the general government, if our Governors and State legislators, and sheriffs, and mayors and councilmen were all under the control of the President; if he could at will decapitate all obnoxious subordinate rulers with one blow, all our political liberties would be at an end. But, happily, all these lesser officials enjoy full authority in their spheres and are independent of the chief magistrate.

M'DONALD MAKING BIG SENATE FIGHT IN SECOND BRISTOL

FALL RIVER, Nov. 4.—One of the most interesting and exciting campaigns in the State is being fought out here in the second Bristol Senatorial district, between Charles A. McDonald, Democrat, and Walter E. McLane, Republican, who won last year by twenty-three votes. Mr. McDonald joyfully started in this year to make that "23" spell finish for McLane and an exciting campaign was resulted. McDonald has had big, enthusiastic rallies. He is confident of winning. The battle cry has been:

"Fall River wants a real, live, progressive representative in the Senate. This city is alive, and it wants a people's man on the job, not a corporation bound standpatter."

Mr. Lane is fighting for his political life and knows it. He has had few rallies, and at most of them the entire speaking had to do with a defense of Taft and high tariff.

SAY TAFT LEADERS PLAN A DEADLOCK

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—That word has been sent to several Western States by the Taft managers asking their followers to throw their strength to Roosevelt in order to force the election of a President into the House of Representatives, was a report which was circulated in political circles here today.

According to the report the Taft people, believing that Wilson was running ahead of the field, planned to secure enough electoral votes for Roosevelt to cause a deadlock in the electoral college.

WOODROW WILSON GASHED ON HEAD IN AUTOMOBILE JOUNCE

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 4.—Governor Woodrow Wilson attended to his correspondence today as usual, being little bothered by the scalp wound he received when his auto struck a mound in the road and jolted him against a rib in the roof of the car.

When the Governor met the correspondents he was wearing a narrow strip of collodion and gauze covering a wound three inches long. He said he would close his campaign as he had planned tonight, with speeches in Passaic and Paterson, N. J., speaking again on behalf of the Democratic legislative ticket.

"I'll feel considerable of the gallery when I speak," said the Governor, as he thought of the bald spot and strip of plaster on his head, "but the lower tiers won't see it."

DEMOCRATS WIND UP WARD 20 CAMPAIGN

The Democratic committee on Ward 20 will wind up tonight with a band concert, torchlight parade and rally in the ward-room, Meeting House Hill. The band concert will be held outside the wardroom, where Governor Foss, David I. Walsh, Mayor Fitzgerald and others are scheduled to speak at 8 p. m. Major Henry H. Crowley of the Governor's staff will preside. Following the rally the torchlight and automobile parade will start. John F. Landers will be chief marshal, and three halts are scheduled, where open-air rallies will be held in the district of Hed mond S. Fitzgerald, candidate for the Senate; John A. Anderson, Peter J. Donaghue and Lewis E. Sullivan, candidates for the House of Representatives.

'ELECTION ASSURED BY LARGE PLURALITY,' GOV. FOSS ASSERTS

Governor Foss, who will wind up his campaign for a re-election tonight with a whirlwind tour of Boston, said today:

From the Cape to the Berkshires the people are demanding unanimously the better regulation of our railroads.

I am receiving in all sections of the State the most enthusiastic support. My own election is assured by a large plurality on this very issue, and I feel confident that the people, irrespective of party, are endorsing my program and will send to the next General Court men who will co-operate with me in establishing public control.

Massachusetts must do what twenty-nine other States of the Union have already done—create a Public Service Commission with mandatory powers to compel all public utility corporations, and especially the railroads, to render adequate service.

The people throughout the country are fighting for better control of the public services with full appreciation of its tremendous importance. The spirit of our age demands that these great corporations shall be conducted for the public benefit. Their sole right to existence rests on the kind of service they render.

We never had, and we never can hope for, the right kind of service from our transportation interests until we have public control.

Such control will also ensure to the employes proper recognition in wages and the conditions of employment affecting health and safety.

This public demand will result in the proper extension of our steam and trolley service to all sections of the State; and in the Metropolitan district, a physical connection of the railroads and the docks by public-owned tunnels [illegible] the electrification of freight [illegible] senger rates. It will enforce [illegible] operation between the railroads [illegible] the steamship service, which is [illegible] assured through the work of the Port Directors.

It will bring about the proper relation and define the service between the steam and trolley lines, and it will check monopoly in transportation and ensure the industrial and commercial interests the co-operation they are entitled to

A Square Deal For Lieutenant-Governor Robert Luce

He Did Not "Read the Riot Act"

The opponents of Lieutenant-Governor Luce have constantly throughout this campaign made statements cunningly worded to make their hearers believe that Mr. Luce read the riot act, when, as a matter of fact, he did nothing of the kind, and his opponents know it. Is this fair and square?

He did his duty fearlessly. HE DID WHAT WAS BEST FOR THE MEN THEMSELVES. His perfect fairness was shown when he said that enough to fill the hearing room—300—might enter.

The men had every opportunity to present their case, and THEY WON.

LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR LUCE HAS ALWAYS ADVOCATED COLLECTIVE BARGAINING—THE QUESTION THEN AT ISSUE—AND HAD SO STATED WITH REFERENCE TO THIS CONTROVERSY ONLY A FEW DAYS BEFORE. This shows that he was not prejudiced against the men in any way, but quite the contrary. The wage-earners want justice and they know they will always get it from

There is not a more honest or more conscientious man in the Commonwealth than he.

HE IS THE CONSTANT CHAMPION OF MEASURES FOR SOCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL WELFARE.

The very foundation of the RULE OF THE PEOPLE is direct nominations, of which he was one of the pioneers. HE MAY WELL BE CALLED THE FATHER OF DIRECT NOMINATIONS IN MASSACHUSETTS.

Compare His Opponent's Record

The chairman of the Southboro Democratic town committee has resigned because Mr. Walsh's legislative record is so bad.

MR. WALSH REPORTED AND LED THE FIGHT FOR THE FAMOUS BOSTON ELEVATED SUBWAY LEASE BILL. Mr. Luce was against the bill, because it did not safeguard the rights of the people, had no referendum, gave the Boston Elevated Railway Company a long forty-year lease, and created a monopoly.

MR. WALSH WORKED FOR THE BOSTON ELEVATED.

MR. LUCE WORKED FOR THE PEOPLE.

The Boston Central Labor Union passed resolutions condemning those who voted for the bill.

The Boston Post stated that those who voted for the bill deserved a long retirement to private life.

MR. LUCE'S PRESENT OPPONENT WAS THUS CONDEMNED BY BOTH THE BOSTON CENTRAL LABOR UNION AND THE BOSTON POST.

In contrast, Lieutenant-Governor Luce, as a member of the Legislature and of the Public Franchise League, WAS VIGOROUSLY OPPOSED THE DOMINATION OF THE PUBLIC SERVICE CORPORATIONS.

HE WAS THE AUTHOR, with Mr. Edward F. McSweeny, OF THE ANTI-MONOPOLY LAW OF MASSACHUSETTS (1911), similar to the Canadian law, under which the United Shoe Machinery Trust is about to be broken up in Canada, and which can be used to bring down the price of coal and other necessities of life in Massachusetts.

According to the plot, the varsity crew has met with a mishap. The sailors of the Iowa rescue the crew, and out of gratitude for this service the principal, Professor von Kaiser, invites the sailors to visit the college. On the arrival of the sailors the students dress as Japanese and give a Japanese tea in their honor.

During the latter part of the second act in this beautiful Japanese scene incense is scattered in the theatre, and, together with several wonderful light effects and the quaint, colorful costumes of the girls and men, this closing scene of the big society play will be long remembered.

DAKOTA DAN DENIES MORE LETTERS

By CLEMENT L. POLLOCK.

EAST CAMBRIDGE COURTHOUSE, Nov. 4.—Dakota Dan today for the first time gave an explanation of the celebrated Russeau letters, regarded by the Russell estate as clinching their claim that he is Jim Russeau and not Daniel Blake Russell. Before taking the witness stand for the thirty-ninth day of cross-examination and which may be the concluding one, he made this statement to me:

As explanation as to the origin of those letters came to me on Saturday that I never thought of before. You see Mrs. Russell was married before I married her, to a man named Moore. He was a bridge-tender over the Mississippi. He fell into the water and was drowned.

Moore had several brothers and sisters. Mrs. Russell wrote often to me. Detectives were out home before the trial offering five hundred dollars for a sample of my handwriting. I think that they dug up those letters and fixed them as they are now. I never wrote them.

When have you heard from your wife?

I got a letter today. She is some better than she was a week ago, she tells me.

Will she come on for the trial?

No, I think not. It will not be necessary.

Do you expect Senator Simpson to be here in any capacity before the trial finishes?

I don't know yet. He told me he would be here if the Russeaus were called as witnesses.

William R. Scharton, counsel for Dakota Dan, was here today. He asked that the case be adjourned tomorrow. His partner, Joseph H. McNally, is a candidate for Representative in Watertown, and Mr. Scharton wants to help him. There will be but one session of the trial tomorrow, from 9:30 till 1 o'clock.

Offer of Handwriting.

Robert Nason started today's hearing by reading this letter:

Berry & Upton, 166 Devonshire street, city:

Mr. Traxler informs me you want a sample of my handwriting.

D. B. R.

"Did you write that?" queried Nason.

"I wouldn't say whether this is mine or not. But I did write a letter like that at Mr. Traxler's suggestion."

Mr. Nason read this letter. It was addressed to Joseph Russeau:

Bassbach's Iron Works, New York.

Midway, N. D.

Dear Father and Mother:

I am dropping you a few lines to let you know that I am still alive. It is a long time since I wrote. I hope that you are both well. As for me I am not feeling very well. But if anything happens I will let you know. How are Mary and Lizzie? I dream of them every night. I get mail twice a month at Midway. I am too sick to write any more.

Your son,

J. D. RUSSELL.

"Did you write that?"

"No, I didn't write a dozen letters in ten years before this trial. This doesn't look like my writing and it doesn't look like the paper I would use."

The following letter was also read:

December 7, 1890.

Dear Brother:

Your letter found me not in the best of spirits. I have not worked in ten months. If you want to work, come out and you can get a job cooking. I am on a little toot today. How is Mary getting along? I am wild today. I had my hair cut yesterday and I always get wild when I get my hair cut.

Goodbye, Willie, dear.

Your brother,

JAMES RUSSEAU.

Moody, Franklin County, N. Y.

"Will you look at this letter?" began Mr. Nason.

"I don't have to," interrupted Dakota Dan. "I didn't write it. I was in Minnesota and not in New York in 1890."

Money for the "Birds."

The next letter purported to have been written by J. B. Russell, from Medora, N. D., on February 20, 1907, to Ed T. Russeau, at Louisville, N. Y. In this letter the writer praised Dakota and said he could get Ed and his wife a job on a ranch at $80 a month and board. The writer told Ed he would be worth $10,000 in five years.

"Send me a ribbon," said the writer, "and I will tie it in my coat so you will know me when you come."

Dakota Dan denied that he wrote this letter and recalled that he wrote something similar once to the boys of his wife's sister. He denied also the authorship of a letter dated September 1, 1901, at Medora, N. D., written to Joseph Russeau, Jr. In this letter the writer said that he was having a fine time among the cowboys and that he always had "a little money to throw to the birds." He said he had sent pictures of himself, his wife and little dog and of a bunch of cattle. Printed on the envelope was this:

If not called for in
Five days, return to
J. D. Russeau, blacksmith
And wagon maker, Medora, N. D.

Accuses Detectives.

The claimant looked at this exhibit with more than ordinary care. Then he asserted that he never had a wagonmaker's shop in his life and never had a blacksmith shop at Medora. He denied that any of the alleged facts in the letter were true.

Mr. Nason read several other letters addressed by J. D. Russeau, to the Russeaus. The writer spoke of visiting his home people the Summer of 1904. The letters were all couched in affectionate family terms. In one letter the writer promised his parents a farm, dwelling and horses, if they would come to Dakota, and he assured them that if they came, they would never return to "that h—— hole."

When this letter was read Dakota Dan again made the charge that detectives stole letters from his home and from relatives and that they offered $50 for his handwriting. All of these letters, Dakota Dan asserts, are connections of detectives sent to the Northwest to gather evidence to show he was an impostor.

William C. Russell was in court today. A thousand sparks from the eyes of Dakota Dan's women friends shot in his direction as he walked to his seat. But he never saw them. Some of the women I have been told, have followed the elder Russell as well as Ferdinand C. Almy to the street, and have made censorious remarks to them.

Eye-Battery on Upton.

Eugene C. Upton came into court accompanied by an attractive young woman who carried some of the voluminous evidence collected by the defence. The feminine eye-battery from the Dakota Dan boxes swept the lawyer front and rear with Bulgarian ferocity. With affable composure he withstood the boiseless attack, gaining his seat apparently unscathed.

Our Message

To the Men and Women of Massachusetts—

I am not writing this message for myself. If I were the only one interested, it would never have been written. But I am heart and soul in a cause, and that cause shall have all the assistance I can give it.

Representing that cause—the cause of the people—I have talked to many voters, and yet there are many men I have not reached to tell of the principles and the definite measures for which, in Nation and State, the Progressive Party and its candidates stand.

A considerable part of the newspapers have refused to print our speeches, and many of them distort our purposes. Therefore I will tell you here what my position is, and what I want to accomplish.

When I went into the Progressive movement nine months ago, I never believed that, under any circumstances, I would be a candidate for any office. I enlisted upon the understanding that I would not be asked to do more than lend my name, my influence, my energy and my money to the cause; and yet I am the Progressive candidate for Governor.

Well, what could I do? It was represented to me by earnest and sincere men and women that it was my duty to serve, and finally I became convinced that to refuse would prove me recreant to the Progressive cause—a coward on the firing line.

Before and since then I have given money to the campaign outside of Massachusetts, and I have worked as a soldier in the ranks of this Commonwealth, and given all to this State campaign which I may legally give, and yet there is no wish in me to make this secret on the one hand or take any credit for it on the other. It was my plain duty in a battle not for any ordinary political issue, but for the right against wrong.

I believe the two old parties are controlled by the same kind of bosses. The great mass of people cannot hope for more progressive legislation from the Democratic party than they have got from the Republican party. I believe Mr. Wilson will be as helpless as Mr. Taft has been weak.

I welcome our Progressive party because it is pledged in its platform to do for the human family specific things which the old parties ignore. President Eliot says the tariff is the main issue today; Governor Wilson says the trust question is the issue; Governor Foss says the railroad situation is the most important; Mr. Walker does not seem to have found an issue. I admit the great importance of each of these issues with the exception of Mr. Walker's and our Progressive platform and leaders deal with each in definite, statesmanlike fashion. But if these were the only or the main issues, I would not be a candidate for Governor of the Commonwealth. I do not agree with these gentlemen. They do not correctly understand what the people want and need.

I think I know what the people want and need. They want their government returned to them.

They need an administration which has a human heart.

The people want, for instance: A law to establish the Initiative and Referendum, whereby the will of the people may be established by a direct vote of the people when our representatives refuse to carry out our wants.

The people need laws to deal justly and rightly with fundamental human rights—the right of everyone to a life rather than an existence.

Our platform stands, and I personally stand, for:

1. A law to abolish child labor. Thousands of girls and boys under twelve years of age are being ruined in our factories in many States of the country, and this must be stopped if we are to maintain a strong race of men and women.

2. A minimum wage for women.
Thousands of women in Massachusetts are working for less than four dollars per week; and that is below a living wage and must and can be stopped by law if we are going to protect the honor of our women—if we are to care for the unborn as well as those living.

3. One day's rest in seven.
Thousands of men are obliged to work seven days in seven, week in and week out, in Massachusetts, and that is intolerable and must be stopped.

4. Old Age Pensions.
We ought to protect, by a form of social insurance in which the State takes part, old men who if poor have no place in Massachusetts to go to except the poor house.

5. In factories which operate twenty-four hours continuously night and day, such as paper mills, we want to compel employers in such factories to give their workers an eight-hour day rather than a twelve-hour day, a forty-eight hour week, rather than a seventy-two-hour week, as now prevails in those mills.

It is difficult to understand why these planks do not interest my opponents—Mr. Walker and Governor Foss. They certainly affect vitally the life and welfare of every one, directly or indirectly, in this Commonwealth; we must make this State and country a better place for the poorest man and woman if we expect to have it a safe place for the richest man or woman.

Unless we take hold of these human problems in a human way—work them out along the line the other great countries have found to be successful—we shall soon face a social revolution more serious than most of us dream of.

I have been close to the men and women who work. I have achieved some success in building up my business. But I have not lost my heart in the process. More and more, as time goes on, I feel that business success may be achieved without forgetting the toiler at the bottom.

The State, too, must do its share to protect the weak from the greed of the men who recognize nothing save the acquisition of wealth. Our Progressive party platform recognizes this, and that is why I am enlisted in this cause, which I believe to be a real fight to help those who needs help.

The result tomorrow will show that the Progressive party will be a permanent one, because pledged for human betterment.

I have made the best fight for that cause that I am capable of making. I have had a somewhat successful business life in dealing with men and money, and most men will believe that this fits me as well to be your Governor as though I had been in politics for 20 years.

MANDOT IS SLIGHT FAVORITE IN BATTLE WITH AD WOLGAST

BOSTON AMERICAN

SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

This year, beyond doubt, will be one of the greatest in the history of billiards. There will be a world's championship tournament in New York next week. It will be held in the Hotel Astor and this will be the first time in America that an affair of this kind has been held in a hotel. In Paris many of the great matches that were played when Maurice Vignaux was in his prime were staged in the dining room of the Grand Hotel. After the diners had finished their meal the chairs and tables would be removed, workmen would set up a 5x10 table, chairs would be replaced and at 9:30 or thereabouts the billiard match would begin. As befits the "gentlemen's game," the participants in any billiard match of importance always appear in evening dress, but usually the close hammers or dinner jackets come off as soon as the principals "string" for the lead and the players continue in their shirt sleeves in order that their arms may have free play for the delicate manipulation of the ivories. The late Jake Schaefer and his old rival, George Slosson, however, had little cardigan jackets handy to slip on in place of the clawhammers.

One of the interesting figures in the coming championship tourney, which will be at 18.2 balkline billiards, is the Japanese expert, Koji Yamada.

For several days he has been practising at Slosson's rooms in New York. The newspapers have been somewhat vague in describing his ability as an all-round billiardist and it is impossible to form an opinion as to his chances in the coming tournament. He is said to be the smallest man that ever engaged in a championship tourney, but small as he is he rarely uses a bridge and reaches over the table in a manner that reminds one of Schaefer. He is ambidextrous. At masse shots he seems most proficient and his skill in this respect is displayed with either hand with equal facility. The matter of fact and prompt way he has solved masse shots has astonished even Slosson who was led to remark "He can make better shots with his left hand than I can with my right."

This, however, is nothing surprising, for if there is a shot on the table that Slosson dislikes it is the masse. Schaefer never hesitated, but would execute the masse in the most nonchalant manner, making the most dazzling shots without an instant's hesitation. Not so Slosson. Whenever he had even a simple masse to perform he would seek other ways of making the count, but failing to find a better way would return to the masse and go about it in the most gingerly manner.

With his cue raised in the air it would seem to the spectator that he never would make the shot. The wonderful finger his cue up and down in little, short, jerks until a nervous onlooker would be ready to jump out the window.

At one of the matches in which Slosson was engaged as a spectator counted seventy-eight of these little diddling strokes "Gladstone George" finally delicately touched the ball with the cue.

The execution of masse shots by either hand will not win the tournament for Mr. Yamada. Unless he is a first class all-around player he stands no chance of taking any part of the prize money back to Japan.

Years ago there was a billiardist, named McCreery, a San Francisco, who developed remarkable proficiency at the straight-rail game. He broke all existing records in his exhibitions throughout the country and finally became imbued with the idea that all other billiardists were counterfeits. He challenged Schaefer to a match at 3,000 points, straight-rail, $1,500 a side, to be played at San Francisco. I was a kid reporter at the time and among my duties was that of writing billiard news. Much to my surprise, Schaefer promptly accepted the challenge and started for San Francisco to play the match.

I was very much afraid Schaefer was up against it, for I had seen McCreery give an exhibition and I recalled that Schaefer's record at straight-rail wasn't anywhere near that of the San Francisan. The monotony of this style of game had caused it to be discarded by the professionals of the front rank such as Schaefer, Slosson, Vignaux, Newton and Daly, the headliners of those days, and balk-line had become the recognized style of play. I was afraid for Schaefer, and told Slosson I thought Jake had lost his senses in accepting a challenge from McCreery.

"You're crazy," said Slosson. "Jake will win in a walk."

"How do you make that out," I exclaimed. "This fellow McCreery has made 3,000 points or more in one run. Jake never did that."

"Nevertheless Jake can make 3,000 or 30,000 points at straight-rail any time he wants to. So could I. The straight-rail nurse is simply a trick, and once you learn it you can keep on counting until you drop from physical exhaustion."

"But, if that's the case what's to prevent McCreery from defeating Schaefer?" I asked.

"Simply because Jake will get the balls together first. In might take McCreery half the night before he could get the balls lined up on the rail. Jake will have them lined up inside of three innings. And if he misses he will leave them safe."

What happened in that match between Schaefer and McCreery was this:

The match was to be 3,000 points —1,000 points a night for three nights.

McCreery won the "bank" and counted nine, then missed. Schaefer then counted and in five more shots got the balls on the rail. He kept on and ran out the 1,000 points. The position in which he left the balls was marked on the table and on the following night he continued the run, making 1,000 points without relinquishing his hand. On the third night Schaefer started where he had left off and ran out the remaining 1,000 points, winning the match, 3,000 to 1.

On the first night of the match, which was played in a theatre, the two contestants appeared in evening dress. On the second night McCreery was there in ordinary citizen's clothes, but he didn't take his cue out of the green bag professional billiardists use to carry around their tools of trade. On the third night when it was time to begin McCreery was not to be seen. After waiting a reasonable length of time the referee said to the spectators:

"Has anyone seen Mr. McCreery?"

A voice from the rear of the theatre answered:

"I'M here; go ahead with the game."

It was McCreery standing up behind the rail that separates the seats from the "standee" space.

After the match was decided McCreery cast about for some way of getting revenge. He dug up $200 and challenged Schaefer to a match at continuous pool, 150 points. Now Jake was some pool player and would have been a champion at it if he had cared to go in for that style of game, McCreery didn't know this. Jake accepted the challenge and won easily.

All McCreery had left was a couple of bird dogs and he bet these against $100 of Schaefer's money, in a game of pin pool. Jake started for the next day with the dogs.

Mr. Yamada may be great on masse shots, but he's got to have something else to win that championship tournament next week.

Guess that's enough billiards for today.

On October 26 Mrs. Helene Britton, who owns the St. Louis National League baseball club said:

"At no time have I had a thought of making Mr. Murphy manager of the Cardinals."

On November 2 the announcement was made that Mr. Huggins had been appointed manager of the Cardinals.

If I had a dollar for every $2 bandy I would quote a few obvious lines.

Mr. Huggins is a little fellow, just the kind of a woman call "too cute for anything" as this column said a few days ago.

Mr. Huggins may prove a very able baseball general, but the writer of "Sidelights" believes that with Mr. Huggins managing the Cards and Mr. Keyes assisted by Mr. Murphy managing the Cubs, there is great hope that the Boston Nationals will be able to finish about sixth next season.

Who is this John J. McGraw who is advertised to appear at Mistrobis boards in Boston this week?

The name has a familiar sound.

Modest Mr. Murphy Talks Tinker Trade

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—Doolan, Beecher, Hohlitzel and Maranan—that's all President Murphy of the Cubs wants for Joe Tinker. When Johnny Evers, new manager, comes back to take up his duties he will be instructed to get these men to keep Tinker. If Evers can make the trade, Murphy says there is nothing to stand in the way of Tinker's managing the Cincinnati Reds.

Diamond Gossip

Horace Fogel says if Joe Tinker's release depends on the Cubs getting Mike Doolan to replace him, he had better make no plans to manage the Reds, for there isn't a chance of Mike being sold, traded or released.

* * *

Some of the Cub motorists are doing their best to live up to Owner Murphy's demand for speed.

The American Association will stand pat on its present salary limit for players, according to President Chivington.

* * *

Fink Bodie has returned to his native haunts on the coast. He is busy telling old acquaintances how the boards were kept on the outfield fences of the American League parks all season.

* * *

Frank Chance has either changed his mind or is being misquoted. The chameleon leader upon his arrival on the coast stated Murphy would have to pay $10,000 if he wanted him to play with the Cubs next season, while a few weeks ago Chance averred he would sign any old contract even if it called for as little as $3,200.

Jack Navin is having lots of trouble trying to get some one to manage his Sacramento team in the Pacific Coast League next season. No less than half a dozen big leaguers have been offered the job so far. Eddie McDonald, the former second baseman of the Pilgrims, is the latest to be mentioned as a possible choice.

Jack Grim is in a peculiar predicament. Jack has a perfectly good bait team under reservation, but lacks a franchise. He owns the players of the Newport club, of which he was part owner, but lost the franchise. Grim hopes to get the Lynchburg club of the Virginia League for next season.

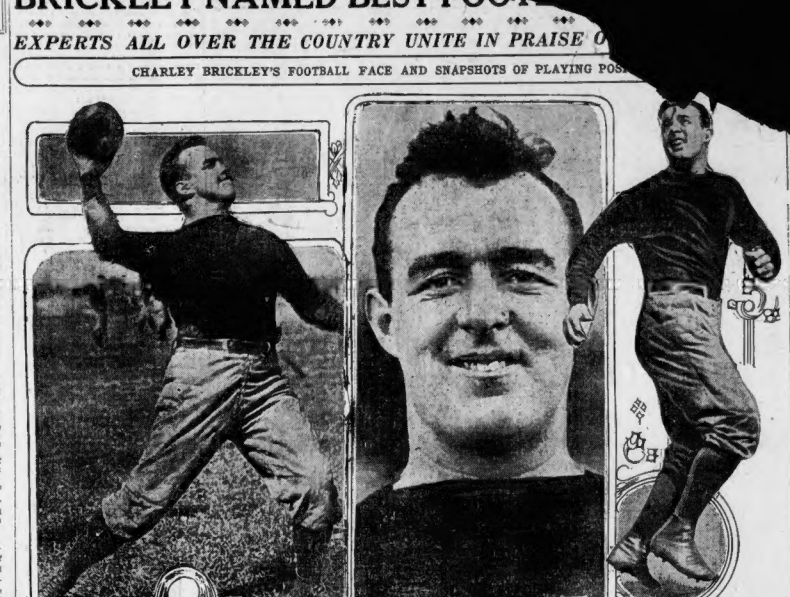
BRICKLEY NAMED BEST FOOT

EXPERTS ALL OVER THE COUNTRY UNITE IN PRAISE O

CHARLEY BRICKLEY'S FOOTBALL FACE AND SNAPSHOTS OF PLAYING POS



WHAT A FEW OF LEADING FOOTBALL EXPERTS SAY

By H. R. HARDWICK.
Teammate of Charlie Brickley.

We all owe Brickley a good deal for our Tiger victory. That field goal was worthy of the best things that ever Jim Thorpe of Carlisle accomplished, and it is not saying too much to state that Brickley is the coming drop-kicker of the country.

It is no secret to any of the Harvard squad that that place kick saved the game for us.

By PARKE DAVIS.
(Member of Rules Committee).

In the possession of Brickley Harvard had a factor whose plus points alone would have won the game.

In the entire team which crushed out a touchdown in the closing moments, which was followed by a goal, Harvard also disclosed a superior scoring power which without Brickley's goals again would have won the game.

But Harvard had both Brickley and a team, so the Crimson's victory is beyond the cavil of any captious critic.

By DAMON RUNYON.
Sporting editor of N. Y. American.

The boot of Charley Brickley, a native son of old Massachusetts, spanned a dreary chasm of a quarter of a century in Harvard football history. Of Harvard's eighteen points nine were due to the kicking of the Everett boy. The fact that Harvard finally managed to cross the Tiger goal line for a touchdown was merely a sop to Crimson vanity as Brickley had won the game for Cambridge before that came about, driving enough field goals across the Jersey bars to offset the Harvard touchdown.

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

Brickley was the real star of the game. Not only were his rushes strong and effective, but his kicking was enough to win the game for Harvard without the assistance of the touchdown.

Nine of Harvard's sixteen points came from the toe of the Everett lad.

By PERCY HAUGHTON.
Coach of Harvard Eleven.

It is difficult to give due credit to each and every man, but to Charlie Brickley belongs the lion's share. With the exception of Thorpe's, performances against Harvard in the past I have never seen a successful performer than was Brickley. His place kick from the 47-yard line practically won the game, for it gave Harvard the lead and seemed to take the heart out of the Princeton players.

I remember only two performances which can be compared with his, viz., Burnett's goal from placement in the Harvard-Pennsylvania game in 1908 from the 42-yard line, and De Witt's kick against Yale from the 50-yard line, which won the game for Princeton by a score of 10-6.

By PERCY WENDELL.
Captain of Harvard Team.

Charlie Brickley was the real power in our attack, and as far as I could pick out any one man on the Harvard team to credit with the victory, he is the one. From his work this afternoon I think he is one of the most remarkable players that football has ever developed, if not the very best of them all.

By WALTER CAMP.
Famous Yale Coach.

Brickley was by all odds the star of Saturday's game, even outside his field kicking. He appears a very versatile young man. He is a strong line smasher, kept going well and made one of the prettiest runs of the game from punting over on the alert on the defence. If he maintains his present gait through his remaining college years he will rank very high amongst the greatest heroes of the game.

By KEENE FITZPATRICK.
Princeton Trainer and Coach.

I set down the performance of Brickley against Princeton as one of the greatest athletic exhibitions it has ever been my good fortune to witness. He is one of the finest athletes of any time, and every man on the Princeton eleven is of the opinion that Brickley's name will be remembered for years to come on the strength of the defeat which he administered to Princeton. Giving all the credit to the rest of Coach Haughton's machine, it is my opinion that the victory would certainly have been Princeton's if it had not been for the wonderful work of Brickley in the back field.

Brickley is one of the greatest athletes I have ever laid eyes on.

By L. R. MURDOCH.
(Sporting Editor of AMERICAN).

The game was almost a battle of "Brickley against the Tigers." The Everett youth kicked the three field goals. He is possessed the ball 78 yards of the 187 over which Harvard carried it by rushes. He was the center of the Crimson backfield. Dow and Dean both worked in place of Brickley.

His kicking was versatile. One of his field goals was a drop kick from the fifteen-yard line at the west end of the field; another drop-kick fifteen yards from the east goal post. The third was the most remarkable kick ever made in a "big" game at the Stadium. It is the third period, with the score a 6-6 tie, Brickley kicked a clean field goal from placement from Princeton's forty-eight-yard line.

By Paul Withington.
(Assistant Graduate Manager of Harvard A. A.)

Brickley well deserves the praise which has been showered upon him. Many critics have doubted his ability to repeat his brilliant work of the minor games when under the pressure of a championship contest.

He clearly demonstrated that he is not only a brilliant player, but a man of splendid nerve. He was the object of Princeton's attack on every one of Harvard's plays.

PIPE DREAMS

HAPPY HORACE.

Consider Mr. Fogel! What a happy man is Horace!
He now will make us laugh by turning mental handsprings for us.

Mr. Fogel has trotted out General Dental, but General Nuisance still holds the fort.

John J. McGraw has made his debut in vaudeville and escaped uninjured, owing possibly to the high price of eggs.

A Wisconsin motorist ran down a bear with his gasoline bus, but Charlie Murphy ran down a whole drove of Cubs with a water wagon.

DEVELOPMENT.

A youth of undeveloped mind
In football bravely starts,
And when they pick him up they find
He is a man of parts.

* * *

Among other things, Frank Chance has succeeded in reminding us that Albuquerque, N. M., still is holding down a spot on the map.

* * *

Andy Carnegie's flippant remark that he laughs at wealth is enough to cause a royal flush, to be speak.

Quoth John J. McGraw: "There never was and never will be another pitcher quite like Matty." Mr. McAleer will now arise and say a few kind words in behalf of Joe Wood.

A study of comparative football scores is a great mental stimulant aside from the fact that it leaves the situation as clear as mud.

SKILL AS PITCHER SAVES GRIFFITH

HELENA, Mont., Nov. 4.—Charged by a wounded deer and unable to use his rifle, which had jammed, Clark Griffith, manager of the Washington American League team, saved himself from probable serious injury by his clever skill as a pitcher. Seizing a stone the size of a baseball he threw and struck the animal on the head, felling it. He then killed it with the butt of his gun.

This was the story told by several of Griffith's friends, who returned here from Griffith's ranch.

CENTRAL LEAGUE SPLIT IN TWO

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Nov. 4.—The old Central League, a twelve-club organization, was dissolved at yesterday's session of the league directors and in its place two six-club leagues were launched, a Western and Eastern circuit.

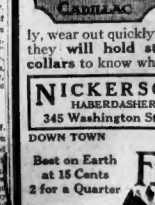
WARN OF ROUGH PLAY.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., Nov. 4.—Formal warning to the University of California that "unsportsmanlike tactics will not be tolerated in the annual intercollegiate rugby game on November 5," has been forwarded by Stanford University officials. The Stanford authorities, since the intercollegiate game last year, have been dissatisfied with California's methods.

CORBETT DOING WELL.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 4.—James J. Corbett, former heavyweight champion boxer of the world, has so far recovered from his recent operation for appendicitis that he expects to be out taking walks within a week or so. The physicians now are visiting him only once each day, and his strength rapidly is returning. They say it was Corbett's iron constitution and pluck that pulled him through the crisis.

WILL HOLD STARCH



Long ago an expressive housewife would comment upon any doubtful story by saying "It won't hold starch."

Some collars are so made that they will not hold starch. They lack backbone, wilt easily, wear out quickly. Frisbie collars are built so that they will hold starch. You must wear Frisbie collars to know what this means.

PART I.—Continued

By BERTAND BABCOCK

"SAY, do you know what I am going to do from now on?" he shouted, rather than exclaimed. "I'm going to make the loudest noise that's been heard on Broadway since Dewey came home from the Spanish War."

"Have you gone crazy again?" snapped Wallace.

"Do you know what happened after you went to add up those penny expenditures of mine?" continued Jackson. "A messenger boy with golden wings blew in through the window, handed me this message and flew right back to the golden gates. Read it."

Bob read the message.

"Is this a joke?" he said in the same tone he had used when he heard that Jackson was determined on marrying Mrs. Gerard.

This possibility had not entered the head of the speculator.

"If it is I'll make a reputation as a gunman," he said grimly.

Wallace was lost in wonder at the strange and sudden shower of gold which had suddenly descended.

"Why this is the most wonderful thing that has ever happened," was his view.

Broadway was already busy with the plans of a speculator.

"Do you know what I'm going to do?" he went on, turning over in his mind the things he wanted to do. "I'm going to buy Brooklyn and close it up. Say, did you ever hear of the Consolidated Gum Company?"

"Certainly; they're the biggest advertisers in America."

Pembroke, the second vice-president, came as the judge said he would. He came while you were in the other room," resumed Jackson, "and he's coming back here at 2 o'clock."

Wallace was suddenly suspicious of what his friend might have done in the hands of an astute business man such as Pembroke.

"What for?" he demanded, quickly.

"To bring me a check for twenty hundred thousand. I've sold him Jones' Pepsin. Don't you think I'm the best business man ever?" came from Broadway all in a breath.

Dismay spread over the rather heavy features of Wallace. He put in, sharply:

"And you accepted?"

"Of course; I'm too much of a business man to let all that money stay out of circulation."

"Sign an agreement?" Wallace's tone would have cut through the hardest steel.

Broadway was almost on the point of apologizing. Then he took a sudden mental brace as he answered:

"Not a thing."

Not Too Late

"Not yet."

A flitting shadow of delight appeared for a moment in the eyes of the advertising man, but speedily force and determination took its place.

"And you're not going to," he said, fairly glaring into the face of Broadway Jones, whose shoulders slumped.

"Why not?" he asked in the tone of a schoolboy receiving punishment.

Wallace's force was sweeping Broadway off his morning-after unsteady feet, as he continued vigorously:

"Now, don't give me any argument. You've been a fool all your life, and you're going to stop right now."

"What," cried Jones, "turn down a million, two hundred thousand?"

"Yes."

"Not on your biography."

But Wallace was not to be denied. His tone was as forceful as ever, as he said:

"What you need is a keeper, and I'm going to take the job."

The sudden ringing of the telephone operator, who had got Judge Spotswood on the telephone, put an end to this exchange between the two young men. Wallace did not know that Jackson had put in a call for the Jones family lawyer in the chewing gum town, but he suspected that Broadway might have done something foolish, so he raced with Broadway to the telephone and reached it first.

"That's Spotswood, my uncle's attorney in Jonesville," explained Jackson. "I called him up."

"Hello, Mr. Spotswood," said Wallace into the telephone. "What?"

Hurried Plans

Jackson tried to put his own lips close to the transmitter as he said:

"Yes, Judge, we want you to come to New York at once."

Wallace pushed him away, as he replied to the bewildered inquiry of the country lawyer:

"No, no, Judge, we don't want you to come here. We'll go to you!——

"But I tell you I won't," remonstrated Jackson to Bob.

Wallace ignored him as he continued to the lawyer in Jonesville:

"Yes, you are under handing me now. We'll be there by 6 o'clock, in time for dinner—yes—good-by."

Broadway Jones was almost angry. If he had been less rushed by Wallace he would have been thoroughly so.

"Say," he exclaimed, roughly, "what are you trying to do—run my affairs for me?"

Wallace paid not the slightest attention to his anger.

"Yes," he replied, and then shouted for Rankin. When the latter appeared he ordered:

"Pack a grip for Mr. Jones. He's going traveling."

"To Japan, sir?" asked the butler, in a pleased tone.

"Same thing, Connecticut," returned Wallace.

Down rebellion now surged through the mind of the youth who had spent his patrimony for waiters' bows.

"Say, look here, I don't intend to stand for this much longer," he began, as he saw the butler running to obey Wallace.

"Shut up!" roared Wallace.

Broadway opened his mouth to reply, but didn't, as the doorbell rang loudly.

Wallace made this an occasion to keep Broadway moving.

"See who's at the door, will you?" he commanded.

Like a Waiter

"Say, I'm not working for you, am I?" retorted Broadway tartly.

"Go on, do as you're told."

Much as he had been accustomed to follow a headwaiter blindly to the best table, Broadway advanced to the door, marveling at himself. A sharp command from Wallace halted him.

"Wait a moment. It may be Mrs. Gerard. Didn't she say she'd be back in half an hour?"

The mention of the name of the elderly divinity of Broadway brought back to Wallace Broadway's complete though grumbling obedience. Anything now to escape her, since he was rich and did not need the widow's mite. He ran to the window and saw her louring car. He hurried back to Wallace and extended his arm as a child to its parent for protection.

"It's she, all right," he said in fear. "What shall we say to her? What shall we do?"

"Get your hat," said Wallace. "Let me think. Is there any rear way out?"

"Down through the kitchen, out onto the back yard, over a fence and then through the tradesmen's entrance of the Arleigh Hotel to the street above this one."

"That'll do," said Wallace, and he called Rankin.

The butler would have the grip packed in five minutes. Wallace told him that they couldn't wait.

"We've got to make a train. See who's at the door. We're going out the other way. Come on," said Wallace.

Broadway hung back for a moment.

"Oh, Rankin," he explained, "there'll be a party of men here at 2 o'clock.

"What shall I tell them, sir?"

"Tell them, Rankin," began Broadway, but Wallace interrupted with, "Tell them to go to, Rankin."

"I understand, sir, perfectly, sir," said the butler, but he spoke to empty air, for Wallace and Broadway had left the room. Wallace fairly dragging the now almost stupefied Broadway.

Rankin opened the street door, and Mrs. Gerard, love fairly radiating from her twitching senile face, pushed past him into the room the two young men had just left. She called out with the break of age in her voice: "Oh, Jackson, dearie Beatrice is here, honey." When not even a lovelorn echo answered her she turned to Rankin: "Where's Mr. Jones?"

"He's gone, ma'am," as gravely as though he were speaking of a departure from this life.

Panic smote the triple widow.

"Gone where?" she faltered.

"To Japan," said Rankin, bowing to hide a smile.

PART II.

Jonesville Is Anxious

THERE may have been certain benighted persons in New York who were not entirely familiar with the doings of Broadway Jones—of his existence they could not be ignorant if they so much as only occasionally glanced at the front pages of the newspapers. If such persons there were they could only be found in the class which condemns the "newspaper habit" and gets its knowledge of current events a month or so after their occurrence in the reviews.

But there were none such in Jonesville, Ct., the town founded by Broadway's grandfather as a mere hamlet, but which under his father and uncle had grown to several thousand. The Jonesville Weekly Censor did not, it is true, carry the stories of his whitening the already Great White Way, but there were several home and foreign missionary societies in the town which held regular meetings. Then, too, old Miss Smyth, who lived in the big house on the hill, had a young nephew who had settled in New York, and who occasionally took a stroll up Broadway, "just to see what Broadway Jones was doing," he explained to his aunt. The nephew's letters were summarized, and on occasions even read, at the meetings when the women gathered to sew for the "heathen." But for every needle prick they gave their handiwork they stuck two into Broadway Jones.

"Miss Smyth" took all of the New York newspapers, too, and whenever Broadway had made a "splashing" her copies of the publications travelled from hand to hand.

So it was that Jonesville kept itself informed of the doings of the son of his father. Of its own affairs—prospects at the chewing gum factory—Jonesville was equally cognizant. Judge Spotswood was a close-mouthed man to all—save his wife.

He Always Did

But—

"Mom," he would often say, "I really ought not to tell you anything not intended for publication."

However, he did.

And—

Well, all Jonesville knew not only of the death of Andrew Jones, Broadway's uncle, but it had learned as well that the youth who had first been called Broadway on Main street, Jonesville, Ct., was heir to his uncle's plant and factory. It also gurgled that the gum trust would approach Broadway, and that it would probably succeed with the nephew, where it had failed with the uncle.

It was this latter feature of the unusual series of events for the little town that worried Jonesville. The town was isolated, but it knew something of trust methods. Hence it suspected that once the jaw-agitating corporation acquired the Jones-Spotts gum plant no more manufacturing would be done in Jonesville. The employes of the plant would have to find work elsewhere—capital knows no mobile, but labor less so—and all the train of little business centring about the Jones family would be practically destroyed.

The future of the Jones plant—that is to say, the future of the town—was talked over for hours by an anxious circle in Green's grocery, Pendleton's drug store, in the Grand Central and even in Smith Brothers' Bazaar, Emporium and Mammoth Department Store.

Household Hints

To give additional endurance to the wearing qualities of the heels of stockings, rub paraffin on them.

When buying window shades get an extra set of catches. Put one set at the usual place, the other about a foot lower. In cold weather hang the shades on the lower catches and leave the window down from the top. This gives perfect ventilation and prevents the shade from blowing about.

When "doing up" lace curtains fold them lengthways and starch the edges only. In this way an economy in starch is effected, the curtain looks better and they do not so quickly wear into holes as when starched all over.

A low stool with a broad seat, most convenient for drying the feet, for putting on shoes and stockings or pedicuring, is given a touch by one housekeeper that makes it effective and sanitary. The cushion is covered with a neatly fitted slip, with square top and sides, made of thick white Turkish toweling.

To make corks fit in catsup bottles take ones that are a little large and boil them in clear water for twenty minutes. This decreases their size. Insert them in the mouths of the bottles while hot, as they expand in cooling, thus making perfectly tight stoppers.

After peeling onions it is often difficult to remove the unpleasant odor from the hands. This can be remedied by rubbing the hands with salt and then washing them in cold water. The odor will then quite disappear.

Sometimes in an emergency one has to address a letter or a postcard with a lead pencil, and there is always the danger that the writing will become blurred before it reaches its destination. To prevent this breathe on the writing and then blow on it, and it will remain clear for some time.

Keeping the Cat in the Bag

They were two boom friends, but although they were women, one of them had never confided her age to the other.

"Yes," she was saying; "I've kept the secret of my age ever since I was twenty."

"Really?" said her friend. "Never told anyone?"

"I expect you will some time. You're bound to let the cat out of the bag when you least expect it."

"Not likely! After I have kept a secret for ten years I'm not likely to give it away!"

NOTED BOSTON STORE ASSUMES NEW NAME

Today was a day of unusual interest to the retail drygoods trade and to the New England public, because of the changing of the name of the James A. Houston Company to the Magrane Houston Company. The change was a red-letter event in the history of the retail drygoods trade.

In the recent court proceedings which delayed the changing of the company's name, there was no question of the undivided ownership of the business by Jas. Mesnic. Magrane. The State Supreme Court was petitioned to prevent the use of the new name, but without success.

The Messrs. Magrane of Lynn first entered the business life of Boston in July, 1906, by the purchase of the James A. Houston Company. Since that time all public announcements and all official papers have borne the names of P. H. Magrane, president, and P. H. Magrane, treasurer, with the result that the name Magrane has become as much a mark of identity as the name which was retained on the signs above the door.

The Store's History.

After the purchase six years ago, the Butler of the name was considered of secondary importance to the development of the store along certain well-defined lines tending toward the function of public service which the company now so well performs.

The story of the growth of the store is of peculiar interest also. It was founded in 1842 by George Turnbull & Company. Its policy was established for reliability and square dealing. Twelve years later Kilmouth & Company assumed control and enlarged the store. In 1858 Hogg, Brown & Taylor began their thirty-two years control. In 1892 Houston & Henderson became the proprietors. In 1905 the James A. Houston Company was reorganized by the present management. Since that time the growth of the store has been more remarkable than ever, and is known to the public of New England.

As striking as the growth of the store in its features of perseverance, progress and well deserved success is the career of P. H. Magrane. In the Spring of 1876, Mr. Magrane opened a store at No. 157 Market street, Lynn, carrying $200 worth of goods. The business rapidly developed. In 1892 Mr. Magrane bought the site of the present Lynn store, at that time used for factory buildings and comprising 36,000 feet of land. This business also has grown so rapidly that now it is one of the largest in New England, outside of Boston.

Lynn's Largest Taxpayer.

Mr. Magrane is Lynn's largest taxpayer and houses about 200 families.

Mr. P. H. Magrane, the son and president, was educated in the public schools and at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, class of 1902. He at once entered into his business career, beginning with a four years' training at the head of the Magrane store in Lynn. This gave him a superb equipment for directing the business of a leading Boston store. In November, 1908, Mr. Magrane married Miss Monica Markey of Brookline. He is a resident of Brookline.

The store has grown, since the antebellum days, been noted for its importation and sale of silks and woolens, household linens and domestic goods, doing a large volume of wholesale as well as retail business. At the time when the women's ready-to-wear apparel business was only in its infancy, the store was among the first to realize the future of the specialty. The store has taken a leading part in the development of this feature of the business.

The store is also a leading exponent of the "progressive" policy of merchandising. It was the policy inaugurated six years ago under the Magrane management. Progressive merchandising was defined by the Messrs. Magrane as merchandising carried on from the standpoint of the customer rather from that of the store.

The word "service" has always been given a unique meaning in the conduct of the Magrane Houston store. It means that it is more important to satisfy the customer than it is just to sell merchandise. Another important feature is that the price factor is maintained as a primary point of service.

Righteousness More Than Dietary Laws, Says Rabbi Hirsch

CHICAGO, Nov. 4.—"If the dietary laws were meant for health laws, then Moses was a rascal," declared Rabbi Emil G. Hirsch in his sermon before the People's Synagogue Association in the Ziegfeld Theatre.

"It does not stand to reason that the dietary laws were other than the continuation of a custom," he said. "If they were really meant to protect the health of the Hebrews, why did Moses declare that while the Jew should not eat this or that he could nevertheless dispose of it to the Jew."

"I urge that, instead of pondering about the observance of the dietary laws, abstaining from certain foods, you lead a life of righteousness and help to spread our religion among our people. There are many of our customs today which we observe unthinkingly and which are simply the outgrowth of superstition. We wear a watch charm. Originally it was worn to protect one from disease and evil spirits. The pearl necklace is but the remnant of superstition."

PUBLICITY MEN TO HEAR NEW YORKER

FUNERAL TODAY OF W. E. BUTLER

The funeral of William E. Butler, president of William E. Butler & Company, took place today from the Butler house on Norfolk road, Chestnut Hill. The services were simple. There was no music. Rev. Eaglen W. Rogers, rector of the Church of the Redeemer at Chestnut Hill, officiated. The interment was in Mt. Auburn Cemetery, the Episcopal burial service being read.

Among the business associates and close friends of Mr. Butler who attended the funeral were E. A. Filene, of Filene's store; J. N. Jewett, of Everybody's store; Rufus Albertson, manager of Butler's store; F. W. Garcon of Gilchrist's, Charles C. Perrin of Gilchrist's, Attorney Charles F. Weed, President Joseph B. Russell of the Chamber of Commerce, T. R. Doolittle and John H. Fahey of the Chamber of Commerce.

In memory of Mr. Butler a number of department stores of Boston closed this afternoon between 1 and 2 o'clock, including Filene's, Jordan Marsh Company, Butler's, Gilchrist's, Eraybody's, R. H. White, Shepard Norwell, R. H. Stearn's and Houghton & Dutton.

CHAFIN "ELECTED" BY WINTHROP BAPTISTS

At the riots of the service last evening the pastor of the Winthrop Baptist Church called for a "straw vote" for the five presidential candidates. The audience responded with enthusiasm, and with the following result: Chafin, Prohibition, 26; Debs, Socialist, 4; Roosevelt, Progressive, 17; Taft, G. O. P., 14; Wilson, Democrat, 19.

ELECT C. F. WEED TO BUTLER'S POSITION

The directors of William E. Butler & Company, incorporated; of Gilchrist Company, of Everybody's Store, Incorporated, and Howorth Manufacturing Company and the trustees of the Butler Companies have elected C. F. Weed to the offices made vacant by the death of W. E. Butler.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

Stock Markets Dull at Opening, Election and Supreme Court Decisions Awaited.

STATE STREET, Nov. 4.—The local stock market was very dull at the opening this morning. Pond Creek was the only stock in which there was any active trading and after opening at 25 it advanced to 25½ in the first half hour, an advance of ¾ from Friday night's closing price. Chino opened at an advance of ⅜, but there was practically no further trading in this issue during the first hour. The other stocks were neglected.

The Wolverine Mining Company reports its October output was 1,002,000 pounds of mineral, against 972,000 pounds in September and 1,482,000 pounds in October of last year.

The Mohawk Mining Company's October output was 1,482,000 pounds of mineral, against 1,260,000 pounds in September and 1,348,000 pounds in October of last year.

New York Opening.

There was little speculative interest in trading at the opening of the New York stock market today and the tone was heavy. The three chief factors were uncertainty over the election tomorrow, the possibility that the United States Supreme Court would hand down decisions in the hard coal trust case or the Union Pacific merger case and the Balkan situation.

Many stocks were off. Canadian Pacific made the biggest decline with a drop of 1⅛ from Friday's closing. Among the other declines were: U. S. Steel common, ⅝, Amalgamated Copper ⅝, Baltimore & Ohio ⅛, Reading ¼, Union Pacific ¼ and Southern Pacific ½. Erie common was up ⅛, while Atchison gained ⅜. Missour Pacific was unchanged.

Copper Metal Market.

There is no change in the copper metal situation beyond some small offerings of "second hand" copper at a fraction under the 17⅜ cents producers' price. There is every reason to believe that the producers will hold their prices unchanged and ignore the foreign market, and wait until the consumers' requirements force them to come to the producer. This attitude, of course, is a very important support to the market, and unless there is some decided change in the general situation it is extremely improbable that there will be any decided speculative movement abroad to either depress or advance prices, and that the foreign market will continue as it has been lately, a scalping one.

The impression seems to be quite general that the October Copper Producers' report will show another large increase in stocks. The only basis for such calculation is the reduced exports based on average figures. As a matter of fact, some of the best copper authorities are not expecting any material increase in stocks this month, as production is expected to be smaller than the previous two months.

The decrease of 5,500,000 lbs. in foreign stocks, compared with 2,500,000 lbs. decrease in September, is very favorable.

Lake Superior Coppers.

The recent decline in Lake coppers, in past instances, represents the effect of a narrow market rather than property conditions. The Lake Superior district is not in a financial position to unload its stocks as in years past, due to large increase in expenses, and would suffer very heavily into "Lake" pocketbooks. It is estimated that the Superior & Boston episode cost several millions of dollars out of the Lake district, and as against this the growing list of coppers, other than Lakes, particularly those with a New York market, has attracted a following which has operated against the more local Lake Superior issues. Then again the declines that have taken place in some of the old established Lake investment coppers, such as Wolverine and Osceola—has proved a deterrent factor.

Probably the best value is showing a falling off. The Calumet companies have produced 3,700,000 pounds less copper for the first nine months of this year, but the shortage of labor alone is responsible for this. There are likely to be some extra dividend payers in 1912 among the Lake companies, namely, Isle Royale, Superior and Tamarack, and all three of these stocks have experienced rather unlooked for declines in the face of this favorable situation.

Foreign Financial News.

It is believed that the Bank of Germany will increase its minimum rate of discount this week.

London copper warrants were firm at the opening and 2s. 6d. higher at £75⅛ for spot and £76⅛ for futures.

After a weak opening, because of the official conditions at Constantinople and Austria's rejection of France's intervention formula, the London market became stronger. Consols were weaker in connection with the monthly carry over, while home securities showed a rallying tendency.

American railway shares were steady but displayed a tendency to await the opening of the New York market and the result of our elections. Foreigners and others dropped at the start, but improved later. DeBeers were off ⅛ at 19⅝, and the Transvaal off ⅝ at 72⅝.

New York Cotton Market.

There was an excited opening of the New York cotton market today when a sharp spurt carried prices 11 to 19 points above Friday's closing. Sensational cables which at one time were fully twenty points higher than due and killing frosts in the eastern belt were the factors which resulted in the rise. It was figured by crop experts here that the rising temperatures scheduled to follow the present cold snap would add to injury to the crop. Futures and spot were strong in Liverpool.

13 SALESGIRLS DEAD IN FIRE IN LONDON

LONDON, Nov. 4.—The number of saleslgirls burned to death when John Barker's dry goods store in Kensington was destroyed by fire, was increased to thirteen by a search of the ruins. Twenty more are missing.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

The automobile racing game has been invaded by a woman enthusiast, who believes that suffragist ideas should be injected into the gasoline sport as well as politics.

At the annual Illinois State fair dirt track race meet, which attracted a crowd of 30,000 spectators and a large field of entries, Mrs. W. H. Dean of DeKalb, Ill., entered a Case machine and carried off the most valuable trophy hung up by the fair management.

Along with the cup went the Illinois State Club championship, and such cities were represented as Chicago, Peoria, Bloomington, East St. Louis, Springfield and Decatur.

Mrs. Dean will put the handsome $500 trophy on exhibition at the different auto shows this Winter and will in no probability have her Case racer in evidence.

Proper loading is a big factor in prolonging the life of motor trucks, in the opinion of Harry L. Hough, general sales manager of the American Locomotive Company automobile department. How to secure the right distribution of a load, and the effect of good balance of weight in preserving the springs, tires and other features of mechanism, are told by Mr. Hough in the following suggestions to motor truck drivers:

"Do not place all the heavy articles on the rear of the truck. If you place a heavy article on the rear of the truck, place an article of like weight on the front also.

"If you have a small and heavy load such as steel rods, use a small body. Have the body constructed so that the load will be centered. If a tank body is used to haul over rough roads, it should be made only large enough to carry a normal load.

"Don't overload. If the body is too big, don't load the truck to the capacity of the body."

Electing Wilson President Is Not Enough; We Must Send Democrats to Congress to Hold Up His Hands

Let us not forget that Congress has even more power than the President. Congress makes the law and the President is able only to approve of it. Congress can make a law over the head of the President if two-thirds of the Congressmen think it proper.

Let us not forget that we are called upon to elect Congressmen as well as a President and a Vice-President tomorrow. To elect a President and a Vice-President without electing a friendly Congress would be almost as futile, if we want to accomplish anything during the next administration, as to choose a General and give him no soldiers.

Let every Democrat when he votes for Wilson and Marshall not forget that there is in his district a Wilson and Marshall soldier to be chosen who will fight for Democratic principles on the great National battle ground at the Capitol.

When we vote on Election Day also let us not forget that the candidates for our State Legislature, for the House of Representatives and the State Senate, will choose a new Senator to represent Massachusetts in the United States Senate. Let us not forget that this Senator will occupy his seat in the most powerful legislative body in the world for six long years, representing Massachusetts during that time.

Shall he be a reactionary who, in the words of Mr. Bird, the candidate of the Progressive party, "by reason of his narrow outlook, class prejudices and relations to the big financial interests, would block every attempt to remedy the conditions under which the people of Massachusetts are suffering today?"

Shall he be such a man as Congressman Weeks or Congressman McCall or Ex-Governor Draper, or shall he be a man who is willing to stand for the public interests in spite of his private, personal interests and his business connections, or, better still, who considers that he has no private, personal interests inconsistent with the public interests and is free from all entangling alliances?

The citizens of Massachusetts when they vote tomorrow should bear it in mind that this is the year when a careful selection of their candidates for Representative and for the State Senate will mean a great deal of good for the Commonwealth, while a careless and an indifferent selection of these candidates will mean a great deal of harm. We don't want another Lodge in the Senate from Massachusetts, misrepresenting us and, by his scandalous alliances with the great special interests, disgracing the seat of Charles Sumner.

The Republican candidates for the Legislature this year are peculiarly the puppets of the Lodge machine, for those who could no longer bear the burden of Lodgeism and of the reactionary Republicanism which Lodge represents, have left the party and its dregs only remain.

A vote cast for a Republican Representative this year is a vote cast to indorse the attitude of Senators Lodge and Crane on the great national questions.

Those business men who want to see the business which is special to Massachusetts protected during the next administration are very short-sighted indeed if they undertake to help the election of a standpat Republican to the United States Senate. In a Democratic Congress he will be out in the cold and the voice of Massachusetts will be heard through closed doors. He will have as little influence on the legislation of the next four years as Lodge has had during the last two years of the Democratic House and the Democratic and Progressive Senate.

While the New England people have suffered from an unjust tariff equally with the people of any other section of the country, yet the misrepresentation of our people by New England standpat Senators has brought Massachusetts and New England in disrepute throughout the country as a selfish, overreaching community, responsible for the infamous Schedule K and for Lodge, Aldrich and Hale.

Let us not flout the ideals of the rest of the Nation. Let us not allow ourselves to be misrepresented and considered as alien to the new spirit of the times by electing another man like Lodge or Hale or Aldrich or Smoot, the Mormon, who is now dignifying the Republican party and the Nation by his absolute dominance of the Republican party in the United States Senate. Let us elect in our respective districts a Democrat or a Progressive whom we know will not choose any such man.

It Is NOT Drink That Causes the High Cost of Living, Good Mr. Chafin

The High Cost of Living and Other Kinds of Anxiety, on the Contrary, Cause Drunkenness and Drive Men to Drink

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner

Eugene Chafin, the earnest and interesting candidate of the Prohibition party—he is running for President of the United States, although you may not know it—expresses his opinion in regard to the coming election.

He says he is quite sure that Mr. Wilson will carry forty States, whereas Roosevelt will get only five and Taft three. He adds humorously: "Debs and I will divide the others."

Mr. Chafin may be an excellent prophet as regards elections, but he is not successful in his effort to interpret the difficulties that beset the people of this country.

He is badly mistaken when he says: "Liquor is the real cause of the high cost of living."

Liquor is nothing of the kind.

Nothing is more foolish than to say that drunkenness is responsible for all the ills of society.

The ills of society, on the contrary, are largely responsible for drunkenness.

Men drink to excess when they are underpaid, underfed, worried and distressed.

Those that are foolish say that drink causes poverty. It is poverty that causes DRINK.

When a man lives in a state of anxiety and whiskey holds out temporary relief, the man is apt to take whiskey.

When the high cost of living drives men to despair, and they find it difficult to provide for their families, and when whiskey holds out temporary happiness and contentment—too many of them take whiskey.

It is not drink that causes poverty so much as poverty that causes drinking.

Take away the high cost of living, fight ignorance with education, wash poverty with opportunity, good Mr. Chafin, and you will be surprised to find how quickly you will diminish drunkenness, and how quickly you will solve the problem presented by "the demon rum."

Tariff and Business

The Rankling Sense of Injustice Under Republican Rule Calls for the Calm Judgment of Gov. Wilson at the Helm of Government Affairs.

WM. G. M'ADOO.

By W. G. M'ADOO.

THE pressure upon my time has been too great to enable me to write for your issue today, but a distinguished non-partisan writer has been kind enough to contribute the following article on Governor Wilson and the tariff, which I shall be glad, with your permission, to insert in the valuable space you have so generously put at my disposal.

Since the Baltimore convention the country has taken it for granted that Woodrow Wilson is almost certain to be the next President of the United States, with a Democratic Congress behind him, and during that period times have rapidly become better.

What does that show? Not, certainly, that the good times are actually caused by the prospect of Democratic victory. They are caused primarily by economic conditions beyond the reach of any political influence. They are, however, influenced to a certain degree by general confidence—a general confidence largely inspired by the certainty of Governor Wilson's election.

The widespread confidence and satisfaction of the people, especially of the wage earner and the small business man, have, under Republican rule, been rendered impossible by a ranking sense of injustice. They have felt that prosperity built upon special privilege, tariff graft schedules and monopoly had very little in it for the average home. The discontent led to constant and increasing agitation, and the Republican party, other than its regular or its Bull Moose branch, is incapable of removing this discontent, because the party is built upon ideas of economic special privilege.

Mark Hanna Tariff Ideas

Mr. Taft has been waging his campaign with tariff ideas that would have exactly suited Mark Hanna.

The Munsey papers are leading the Bull Moose tariff campaign, and they are, if possible, more reactionary and stand-pat than the older branch of the party.

Colonel Roosevelt himself has no ideas on economic subjects. He has been a powerful and useful moral agitator, but the agitation has been done, and now we need calm and able economic thought and constructive legislation.

The ex-President probably has no idea whatever of what the underlying causes of the so-called Roosevelt panic of 1907 were. His mind is a military and crusading one. As to Trusts, his only idea is to legalize "good" ones and sunoy "bad" ones. So, on the tariff, he gives us outworn Republican nonsense about pay-envelopes, bunco ideas that the Republicans have been using on the workman so long that the workman is about tired of them.

Governor Wilson's ideas of the tariff are intelligent and clear. He knows that very much needed changes can be made with no shock to legitimate business, and with a great safeguarding of prosperity and the removal of a constant source of inequality and irritation.

He realizes that our industrial system has been built upon protection; that national revision downward must be brought about; free trade is not an issue in the mind of anybody except those who howl free trade to produce a scare whenever any tariff improvement is contemplated. It is a question not of free trade, but of the removal of graft schedules, as attempted by the Democrats in the last Congress and vetoed by President Taft.

Mr. Taft and Mr. Roosevelt, the Republican and the Bull Moose, are the same on the tariff. They merely talk a little liberality for the sound of it, but they will never do anything. They and their party have been raised on the other point of view, and they cannot get rid of it.

Gov. Wilson's Equipment

Governor Wilson is especially equipped for a successful dealing with the tariff requirements. He will listen to everybody, particularly the great body of consumers who have always been ignored heretofore when tariff schedules have been made. He will proceed carefully and intelligently in his recommendations for a just revision of the tariff downward, in the interest of the wage-earner and everybody else; and the Democratic Congress, which will be supporting his administration, will be well equipped with leaders who are experts on the subject, and will be most anxious to make a record which will show the country that the Democrats are able and willing to do for the consumer what the Republicans have often promised, but never done; and, at the same time, give to the business community a sense of stability it has long been deprived of by the unsound basis on which a few conspicuous enterprises have rested.

The business community, fully as much as the consumer, needs a sound Democratic administration. It needs to get away from dry rot, and it needs a fresh, healthy view of things.

The Republican party is stagnant, and the Bull Moose party, with possibly a better surface, is one with the Republican party in its view of economic needs and special privilege.

Mr. Hilles Says:

The Good Old Fable of the Fly on the Wheel. Mr. Taft Has Been Pulling the Load While the Flies Have Buzzed. The Public Knows a Worker, and the Public Will Reward a Good Worker by Re-electing Mr. Taft.

© CLINEDINST. C. D. HILLES

By CHARLES D. HILLES.

THERE is an old fable about the fly and the coach, written by La Fontaine long ago. The coach was slowly and laboriously grinding up a hill. The fly was buzzing and bragging, really thinking it was pushing the coach uphill.

The candidates that talk and buzz are the fly in the fable. And Mr. Taft is the good, honest, hard-working public servant that actually pulls the national coach.

The voters have not failed to observe that the candidates are divided into two classes. One class, occupied exclusively by Mr. Taft, is the class that does things.

And the other class is the class that talks and promises and buzzes.

Take the case of the Russian treaty and of Russia's stupid and unjust attitude toward American citizens of Jewish birth.

Mr. Wilson's friends say that he settled that serious problem by making a speech in Carnegie Hall.

Mr. Sulzer said the other night, speaking in New York City on the East Side, "A million Russian Jews pray for me every night."

Mr. Sulzer, it seems, settled that Russian question.

As a matter of fact, long before Mr. Sulzer or Mr. Wilson had ever heard of the passport question, W. R. Hearst in his newspapers was discussing it and denouncing the outrage—ten years ago at least.

Mr. Taft Does Things

And when the time came for ACTION it was Mr. Taft, President of the United States, who abrogated the treaty with Russia, absolutely.

Others buzzed, Mr. Taft ACTED.

Mr. Taft has done real work while others have done much talking and buzzing.

A big surprise is coming tomorrow for the enthusiastic gentlemen who think that Mr. Wilson will get the election, and the other noisy and enthusiastic gentlemen who are equally sure that Mr. Roosevelt will get it.

Both these collections of enthusiasts forget that there are in the United States among the voters many millions of men of the Taft type, men that attend to their business, men that work more and buzz less.

We hear from the buzzers now. We shall hear from the workers and thinkers tomorrow.

There are some millions of farmers in the United States—they are workers. They are quite busy now with their crops, quite interested in the return of prosperity; they have no time to buzz. But they will vote for Mr. Taft tomorrow. They will not invite Mr. Wilson or Mr. Roosevelt to experiment with a system that is working pretty well.

There are millions of intelligent business men in all of our cities who know in what condition this country was when Mr. Taft took over the administration.

Mr. Taft began his term in a panic, and he ends his term in prosperity, with prospects bright on every side.

Those who think that buzzing and noise can kill off the Republican party are badly mistaken. That party has been prosperous in peace, successful in war. It is possible, as Mr. Dooley says, that the United States could not have beaten Spain if Mr. Roosevelt had not gone to Cuba. But others think that Mr. McKinley, with the aid of the United States Army and Navy, with the aid of Dewey, Sampson and Schley, could have done the work anyhow—even if Mr. Roosevelt had remained at his place in the Navy Department.

The Record of Four Years

Mr. Taft has established the parcels post in the United States.

Mr. Taft has established the postal savings banks in the United States.

Mr. Taft has put on the Federal statute books a clause giving working people compensation for injuries.

Mr. Taft has saved the people's money, collected taxes and customs for the people, and made other public servants work as he works.

Mr. Taft has advocated and has brought about legislation in favor of the children.

When Mr. Taft established postal savings banks he did not seek to advertise himself by shrieking that he would ruin the other banks.

And when he established the parcels post he did not boast that he wanted to wreck the express companies.

He does not talk a great deal about putting this man in jail or dragging that man through the mire.

HE WORKS.

And those that prefer real work to loud buzzing, and prefer real results to empty promises, and real prosperity to reckless change and experiment, will vote for Mr. Taft tomorrow, and elect him.

This is a nation not of buzzing flies, but of men each engaged in pulling or pushing at some real load; men able to appreciate such a man as Mr. Taft, who carries his load steadily and truly, and who has piloted this country out of the panic of 1907 into good times.

What Has Mr. Wilson Done?

Mr. Perkins Quotes Mr. Roosevelt to Show That While Mr. Wilson Was Governor He Did Absolutely Nothing to the Trusts Formed in New Jersey.

GEO. W. PERKINS

By GEORGE W. PERKINS.

ON Thursday evening last, in the course of his remarks at Madison Square Garden, Governor Wilson said, in speaking of destroying business, corporations, etc.: "I have seen the patient lie on the table in New Jersey. I have seen him rise from the table, astonished that he was still alive and rejoicing that he felt better than ever he did in his life. The period of convalescence was extraordinarily short, and there is not a man in large business in New Jersey who would wish to see the government again owned by the large corporations of the State."

This is a perfectly extraordinary statement for Governor Wilson to make in view of the fact that he never lifted a finger to proceed against a single corporation in New Jersey. He says: "I have seen the patient lie on the table in New Jersey." He cannot give the name of any such patient because there never was one, and that is so because he never initiated a single move against even one of the hundreds of corporations chartered by the State of New Jersey.

In this connection, the following statement by Mr. Roosevelt is worth reading at this particular moment:

"The other day Mr. Wilson stated that during my Administration I had done nothing against the Trusts. Mr. Wilson has before criticised the Progressive plank on the Trust question; in the national field he has himself proposed nothing definite and concrete on any subject.

"Mr. Wilson says that I did nothing with the Trusts when I was President. The answer to that is that I did everything. Until I came President there had been no effort to deal with the Trust evil at all in any serious fashion. And one of the amusing features of the criticism of me lies in the fact that it was I myself who, by my actions and by what I accomplished, created the conditions which in their turn have created the public opinion which demands efficient action in the matter. These criticisms represent a purpose to apply to the utterly different conditions of ten years ago the standard of today, which I myself largely helped to create, because I stopped the old conditions when I was President.

"I found the anti-Trust law practically a dead letter and the interstate commerce law almost wholly ineffective; as regards the prime evil of rebates entirely ineffective. There was no precedent for the real enforcement of either law. The railroads were acting with practically entire disregard of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the Supreme Court of the United States in the Knight case had declared that the anti-Trust law did not affect great industrial concerns engaged in manufacture. This decision in effect rendered the anti-Trust law of little or no use. The first need was to put these laws on an established basis of working efficiency, and to make not only the public, but the biggest magnates in the land, understand that the government was even bigger than they were.

"I struck straight at the very biggest railroad magnates and Trust magnates in the country, and I made them understand that the government was supreme over them.

"The Knight sugar case had been decided adversely to the people, under the administration of the last Democratic President of the United States, the Chief Justice of the court at that time being also a Democrat. It was rendered in strict accordance with the States' rights doctrine now zealously proclaimed by Mr. Wilson and the Democratic platform, and it completely emasculated the anti-Trust law.

"My business was to secure the recall of that particular decision, and I accomplished the purpose. Our first proceeding was to bring the Northern Securities suit, which dealt with railroads and not industrial concerns, and therefore offered a larger chance for the court to reverse in principle a foolish and iniquitous decision, while technically refraining from doing so. We won the suit by the margin of one vote, the decision being 5 to 4 in our favor. But it was then necessary to show that the reversal was complete, that there had really been a recall of the Knight sugar case decision, and to do this it was necessary to use the Northern Securities as a lever wherewith to secure similar results against the great industrial Trusts.

"Here again we struck at the two biggest Trusts in the country, the Standard Oil and the Tobacco Trusts.

"Now compare this record with Mr. Wilson's record as Governor of New Jersey on the Trust question. The comparison is easy. Mr. Wilson's record on this matter is a blank. He did precisely and exactly nothing. It is as simple to describe what Mr. Wilson, as Governor of New Jersey, has accomplished against the Trusts as it is to write a volume on the natural history of snakes in Ireland. There are no snakes in Ireland, and Mr. Wilson during his term as Governor of New Jersey has not done one least little thing of any shape, sort or description toward dealing with the Trust problem."

Says Foss Has Made Good

The Chairman of the Democratic State Committee Declares Voters of Massachusetts Know This and Will Re-elect Him Governor Tomorrow.

By THOMAS P. RILEY.

Governor Foss will be re-elected because he has made good. The voters of Massachusetts know this year, better than the orators of any party can tell them, the merits and demerits of the prominent questions and issues of the State and nation.

The only inquiry they are making in order to determine to whom they will turn on Tuesday is: "Who has been on the side we know is the right side?" Governor Foss has been so pronounced in his championship and in his opposition, as the case might be, that his attitude is known to all the voters on each and every question now before them.

And the voters have been looking up Mr. Walker's record.

Mr. Bird can't expect to get any considerable vote under these conditions, because, while he has a splendid private and business record and is a man of heart and brain, so also is Mr. Walker, and there is no guarantee that the fine personality of Mr. Bird will carry through in public office any more than Mr. Walker's undeniable splendid personality did.

Compare the records of Governor Eugene N. Foss—the Democratic candidate for Governor, and that of former Speaker of the House, Joseph A. Walker, the Republican candidate for Governor, and then determine which is the real Progressive.

Governor Foss inaugurated many of these measures that follow, and signed them all in his two years as Governor.

Popular election of United States Senators.

Presidential preference law.

Direct nomination of State officers.

Limitation of campaign expenses.

Workingmen's compensation law for injured employes.

Anti-injunction bill, giving workingmen on strike the right of trial by jury.

Fifty-four hours a week for women and children.

$5,000,000 for State Highway.

Grand Trunk Railway bill.

Minimum Wage Commission.

Appropriation of $9,000,000 for Boston Harbor.

Efficient and humane administration of Public Institutions.

Abolishment of solitary confinement in reformatories.

State Finance Commission (Efficiency and Economy Board).

Plans for the development of waterways, Connecticut and Merrimac rivers.

Bill which saved an annual charge of $125,000 forever on the public consolidation of West End and Boston Elevated Railway.

Supervision of loan business to protect small borrowers.

Plan for "part time" schooling for worker children.

Eight-hour day for public employes.

Pension for State employes and city laborers in Boston.

Plan to improve the prison industry.

Investigation of sale of prison-made goods in open market.

Plan to assist workmen to secure suburban homesteads.

State Labor Board established.

Investigation of stock selling holding companies.

Compensation for suspected persons confined before trial.

Increased number of free scholarships in leading technical schools.

Volumes of other progressive legislation that he called for in both of his inaugural addresses remain in abeyance because of hostile Legislatures.

Ex-Speaker Walker's vote is registered for and against the following measures which are labelled by himself as progressive in his service as a member of the Legislature:

Voted against bills authorizing the submission to the voters on official ballots at elections of questions of public policy (Public Opinion Bill).

Voted against bill to provide for a system of old age pensions.

Voted against bill in favor of the adoption of a parcel post system by the United States government (Parcels Post Bill).

Voted in favor of authorizing steam railroad companies to acquire the stock of railway or street railway companies (Railway Merger Bill).

Voted no on bill to regulate investments by railway corporations in the securities of street railway companies (Anti-Railway Merger Bill).

Voted against bill to regulate the control of railroad corporations. This bill was known as the "Walker Bill," having been drafted by Walker and was wholly in the interests of the railroads, but it became so amended in the effort to protect the public, that it was necessary for him to vote against his own bill, because as amended it was no longer acceptable to the railroads.

Voted against bill to provide for erecting on the State House grounds a monument to the men of Massachusetts who died in the military and naval service of the United States in the war with Spain.

Voted against the eight-hour bill.

Voted against the bill to provide a minimum wage of $2 per day for Metropolitan Park employes.

Voted against the bill to regulate the issuance of injunctions in labor disputes (Anti-Injunction Bill).

Voted against the bill to allow peaceful communication with applicants for position during labor disputes (Picketing Bill).

Practically every vote cast by former Speaker Walker was reactionary.
